CLOSING OF THE MUSICAL ALLIANCE

Last Friday Night's Concert Closed One of the Most Successful Sessions Held by the Association. New President Elected.

Special to the Scranton Tribune.

Factoryville, Oct. 26.—Last Friday was the last day of the Lackawanna and Wyoming Musical Alliance's sixteenth annual session. Prof. Bowman has again demonstrated to the people of this vicinity that his ability as an instructor or conductor is far above the average, and the class of one hundred voices this year has received much benefit under his drill.

The grand concert Friday night, which close the session, was one of the best ever given by the Alliance, the programme of which was published in this column Friday. It was fully carried out and was listened to by one of the largest audiences that ever assembled in the Methodist church at this place. Miss Black, of Nicholson, was heard with much pleasure in the concert work, her clear, sweet voice being heard above the entire chorus. She responded to several encores. Miss Bowman, the solo contralto, also did splendid work and captivated the large audience in her first rendition. She also responded to encores. Prof. Bowman, as usual, was the favorite of the evening, in the instrumental work. In his organ selections, he was repeatedly encored.

The male quartette, composed of Messrs. Hall, Spencer, Clark and Shields, that sang in Thursday night's concert, won the prize of five dollars offered by the Alliance. At the election of officers, Mr. Llewellyn Shields, of Nicholson, was elected president of the Alliance.

TUNKHANNOCK.

Special to the Scranton Tribune.

Tunkhannock, Oct. 26.—The foot ball game played on the fair grounds on Saturday afternoon, between the Montrose and Tunkhannock teams, resulted in a victory for the Tunkhannock team, by a score of 26 to 5.

Mr. and Mrs. William Kinner, of Dimock, were calling on friends here on Friday and Saturday.

Frank Acc, who is employed at Nicholson, spent Sunday with his family at this place.

A hearing was had on Saturday before the court in the matter of the petition for the appointment of a guardian for Mrs. Mary Carver. The petition alleged that she was becoming feebleminded and incapable of managing or taking care of her property. The petitioner is one of her prospective heirs, and the particular acts which are relied upon is that she has lately given certain notes to a grandson of her late husband, and also satisfied a mortgage held by her against his real estate, without receiving any consideration. Much evidence was offered on both sides, and the case occupied the whole day.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Eysenbach leave today for a week's visit in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. James Doubler are sight-seeing at the Pan-American exposition this week.

Howard Hungerford and wife returned on Saturday from New York.

Andrew P. Bedford, of Scranton, was doing business here the last of the week. He now travels on foot, since his locomobile (Topsy) blew up. Mr. Bedford has composed an ode on the loss of his "fiery steed."

Several years ago a young man by the name of Carey, living in Forkston, was accidentally shot, while gunning, by Dr. Wagner, of Wilkes-Barre, resulting in the loss of a leg. Suit is about to be brought in the matter for damages, on account of alleged negligence on the part of Dr. Wagner.

WIMMERS.

On Saturday, an entertainment was held at the school house in Wimmers, which was elaborately decorated with evergreens and other foliage. A Grand Army post met there and many of the neighbors. The scholars gave recitations any one might be glad to hear who had anything patriotic about them. Many speeches were given by the members of the post and by others. One very good one, by Miss Mary Boyer, entitled, "You Put No Flowers on My Papa's Grave," was very effective. Another, by Miss Cora Maddock, was well spoken. There were present many members from different posts—Moscow, Madisonville, Hollisterville, etc. The many patriotic songs woke up the Grand Army.

THE STATE OF ANTHRACITE.

Coal Trade Moves in a Moderate Way at Present.

By Exclusive Wire from The Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Oct. 27.—The Ledger, in its coal article tomorrow, will say:

"The anthracite coal trade goes along in about the same channel. The demand is good, but not excessive. The prudent are ordering coal and filling their bins, but the advent of cold weather will, it is expected, produce a rush of orders that will tax the facilities for delivery. Car shortage restricts the movement and it is not at all improved, the roads universally complaining that their equipment is not equal to the traffic demands upon it. The trade is practically without any new feature and the outlook continues very cheerful in all branches. The output of anthracite to the close of the present month, it is expected, will exceed 44,500,000 tons, an excess of over 6,000,000 tons above last year."

PREACHER SHOOTS HIMSELF.

The Recent Death of His Fiancee Had Depressed Him.

By Exclusive Wire from The Associated Press.

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 27.—The Rev. Otto P. Lenk, aged 25, pastor of St. John's German church, Cullman, Ala., died yesterday afternoon from a bullet wound just over his heart, inflicted by a pistol in his own hands. He shot himself last night while lying on a lounge in Englehart's restaurant in Cullman, and there are some who say it was an accident. His congregation is large and was devoted to him.

Two months ago Miss Minnie Hartung, daughter of Dr. Hartung, a well-known citizen, died. Mr. Lenk was engaged to her and the death gave him such grief that his health failed. He went to Paterson, N. J., where his mother and brother live, to recuperate and returned a few weeks ago. Saturday night he was in good spirits and played checkers with friends. A little later he left them and a pistol shot was heard. He lived until yesterday afternoon.

"The Way of the World."

There is heart and dramatic interest without stint and much really brilliant dialogue in "The Way of the World," the new play by Clyde Fitch, which was given at the Lyceum Saturday afternoon and evening by Miss Elsie De Wolfe and a company of unusual excellence. The play was received with great enthusiasm at both performances.

In act first Mr. and Mrs. Croyden, a young married couple, are automobiling in Central Park, New York city, early one October morning. They are a devotedly happy couple, only regretting the fact that after eight years of married life they are still childless. Croyden, who is considering going seriously into politics, discusses the situation with his wife, whether he is unselfish enough to give up his present most successful law business and sacrifice his leisure and his personal interests to an unselfish devotion to the clean politics of his country. Both realize that both must make many serious sacrifices if he accepts the nomination of governor offered him, Mrs. Croyden showing how already politics have robbed her almost entirely of her husband's company.

Her empty hours have been passed with a young man named Nevill, opposed politically to her husband, who takes Mrs. Croyden's open acknowledgment that she is killing her dull days with him more seriously than she imagines. Nevill has a wife who loves him in spite of his careless treatment of her. And also involved in the story are a divorced couple, named Lake, who both regret their divorce. Mrs. Lake has done a little flirting on her own account, and her worldly wisdom tells her that Mrs. Croyden's innocent amusement with Nevill will not prove so harmless as her friend believes. At the end of the first act, Croyden, still hesitating as to the governorship, is helped to his decision by a momentary jealousy of Nevill and accepts the nomination.

In act two, a year later, Mrs. Croyden though rebelling against the continued absence of her husband, due to his campaign is less lonely owing to her joy in the fact that they have a boy two months old to be named after his father. Croyden's political enemies foster a scandal to defeat his election that Nevill has flirted seriously with Mrs. Croyden and is the father of the boy. At the same time equally false political scandals are current against Croyden, and while both husband and wife disbelieve these reports, their domestic tranquility is upset and finally during a ball at Mrs. Lake's in act third matters reach a climax. Mrs. Croyden realizes that Nevill is a cad who would compromise her if he could and does not realize how deeply she loves her husband. She turns on him and tells him how contemptible she thinks him. Nevill, stung by her words, helps along the political scandal against her husband, and taking advantage of an opportunity momentarily undermines Croyden's confidence in his wife when he is struggling against all sorts of suspicious circumstances. This state of affairs culminates in act four with a strong scene at the christening of the Croyden boy. Croyden refuses to allow the child to be named after him. Momentarily crazed by the jealousy he feels for Neville and the drink he has taken he states in the presence of the bishop and the assembled guests that the child will not be named for him; that it is no offspring of his.

Act five sees the clearing up of the suspicion that has hovered over Mrs. Croyden and she is reunited to her husband on election night, just as the news is brought to him that his candidacy for governor has been successful.

Miss De Wolfe has a role in Mrs. Croyden that fits her admirably. She was naturalness itself and the same all too unusual quality marked the work of Frank Mills, who played Mr. Croyden with fine reserve. He had opportunities galore for heartrending heroics, but he bravely put them aside.

One of the interesting characters in the play is Mrs. Lake, as played by Clara Bloodgood, who has a charm of manner and grace that endeared her to the audience from the moment she appeared. She was most delightfully feminine. Vincent Serrano, was Mr. Nevill, the villainous cad of the play. He succeeded in being sleek and devilish without being oily. Harrison Hunter was Mr. Lake and the other members of the cast were fit assistants to the principals.

The peculiar charm of the play is the extreme naturalness with which every member of the company invested the different roles. Their work harmonized well with Mr. Fitch's dialogue and situations. There is not a line in the play written purely for dramatic effect and there is not a situation from beginning to end that has been strained or "played up" unnaturally to win the plaudits of the audience.

Mr. Fitch sought by means of this play to present an episode in the lives of members of one of New York's fashionable set and he has the art to make his people appear to talk as they would in their homes or in the drawing room. They are not stage characters as the average playwright understands the term.

Harmony with the playwright's idea is the keynote of the treatment the play receives from Miss De Wolfe and her splendid company. A charming play, charmingly played results. The captious may say the incident on which the play is founded is trivial, that it gives a false view of society and all that, but whatever difference of opinion exists as to the subject it must be acknowledged that the treatment from writer and actors is truly artistic.

The first act is slow and talky and gives small promise of a satisfactory play. The automobile in which the Croydens have been riding in the park breaks down, and while the chauffeur is endeavoring to find some one who can mend the break the Croydens sit in the auto, and by their conversation open up the story of the play. As they sit there Mrs. Lake, a friend of theirs, hoves into sight with a badly broken bicycle and presently on dashes Mr. Neville in a racing automobile in which he has been spinning through the park. The other four acts are used in developing the incidents that had their being around the broken auto in the park. As they develop the wisdom of that slow first act is demonstrated.

"Quo Vadis."

The management of the Lyceum have secured Fred C. Whitney and Edwin Knowles' gorgeous production of "Quo Vadis," as dramatized especially for them by Stanislaus Stange for two performances, next Wednesday afternoon and evening.

It is divided into two acts, each one portrayed with the greatest care as to detail. The play opens with the peristyle in Petronius' house, where Vinicius tells of his affection for Lygia, then comes the grounds surrounding Aulus Plautius' home, with Lygia and little Aulus at play, Nero's garden and palace at Rome, an antechamber in Nero's home, the interior of the Mamertine prison and a view of the circus maximus overlooking the arena where Ursus rescues Lygia from the wild bull. Seats go on sale Monday at 9 a. m.

A special bargain day matinee will be given at 2.15 p. m. Prices, 25 and 50 cents; children to any part of house, 15 cents.

Rose Coghlan.

Rose Coghlan, with her charming new version of Charles Reade's love story, "Peg Wolfington," will be the next attraction at the Lyceum Tuesday night next.

With Miss Coghlan's "Peg Wolfington" this public long ago made pleasurable acquaintance. The character fits well with Miss Coghlan's personality and her buoyant temperament. In its lighter moods it is irresistible in its merriment. It is equally honest and sincere and spontaneous in its revelations of the profounder depths of nature stirred by the weakness of Ernest Vane.

Lightness, gayety, generosity, the exuberance of an abounding physical and mental vivacity are beautifully set forth in it, and equally as potently the moan of a breaking heart and the sad cry of a blighted hope.

Jessie Sawtelle Dramatic Company.

The Trenton Gazette says of the Jessie Sawtelle Dramatic company, which opens a week's en with "A Country Courtship," a five-act rural

"The Sawtelle Dramatic company opened its week's engagement at the opera house last night with 'A Country Courtship,' a five-act rural drama, which not only satisfied, but pleased its patrons. The house was crowded.

"Miss Lillian Mae Crawford played the part hitherto portrayed by Jessie Sawtelle. She made good use of her opportunities and did justice to the part of 'Ruby Beach.'

"The rest of the company, also new to this city, is adequate, and fully sustained the reputation of the company as one of the best popular priced organizations extant." This evening the company will present Dion Boucicault's famous Irish melodrama, "The Shaughran."

Broadway Burlesquers.

The Broadway Burlesquers, an aggregation of vaudevillians whose name is synonymous with success, and whose excellence never seems to grow less, but on the contrary seems to grow better, appear at the Star theater the first three days of this week, and to those who enjoy burlesque and vaudeville, a visit to this theater during their engagement will be amply repaid.

Few if any traveling burlesque companies have on their roster such high class performers' names as do the Broadway Burlesquers. Kelly and Davis, in an inimitable funny talking act are without doubt the leaders in their field of work. Thompson and Green, Ethiopian musical comedy entertainers; Lillian Le Couver, Cantatrice Parisienne, a most charming singer, and amongst others of equal merit the great and mysterious "Zieka," who by his clever magic and illusion mystifies, puzzles and bewilders his audience.

The usual style of opening burlesque is dispensed with and is replaced by what may be termed a minstrel first part, an innovation in this class of entertainment, but one which gives ample scope for wit and humor, and is a better vehicle to properly introduce the brightest and catchiest music so intimately connected with colored folk.

STAGE NOTES.

"Ellen Holden," a manatization of Irving Bachelier's popular novel, will be presented at the Savoy theater in New York tonight.

The general opinion is that E. H. Sothern has scored a brilliant success in "If I Were King" and the box office was not slow in realizing that Mr. McCarthy's play is one of the big things of the theatrical season. "If I Were King" is the finest romantic play seen in New York in many a day.

Dave Warfield at the Bijou, New York, continues to enjoy the remarkable prosperity that has rewarded his work since the opening night of "The Auctioneer." Every performance is played to the capacity of the theater. Manager Shubert says that Warfield is the most profitable star he has ever booked.

A new song of the negro-tatiety bits been put into "The Messenger Boy." It is incidental to the mummy dance in the last act, and employs not only James T. Powers and Rachel Booth as lively singers and dancers, but brings the female chorus on the stage in grand-st animation. It is now said at Daly's theater, New York, that "The Messenger Boy" will not leave that theater until after the new year, which may mean that Daniel Frohman will have to place his stock company at another house.

SOUTH SCRANTON

STREET CAR EMPLOYES CONSIDERABLY ANNOYED.

Report That a Serious Riot Was in Progress at Breck Street Caused the Patrol Wagon to Be Sent There. Progressive Euchre Party at the Home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Spruks—William Mitchell Arrested on a Charge of Embezzlement.

People going to church yesterday morning were somewhat startled to see the patrol wagon dash along Cedar and Pittston avenues at a furious rate, with half a dozen patrolmen and specials aboard. Speculation was rife as to what the trouble could be and it was generally surmised that the street cars had bumped up against the usual Sunday snag. So strong was this presumption that more than one regular church attendant stayed away from the services to satisfy their curiosity.

Crowds could be seen all along Pittston avenue, and the return of smashed cars with battered imports in charge of the police was awaited. The patrol returned in about half an hour, and the curious were disappointed. The whole affair, which had been telephoned to police headquarters as a serious riot on Breck street, turned out to be a false alarm.

During the afternoon some annoyance was caused to the street car men at the corner of Elm street and Pittston avenue, where a coal chute was laid across the tracks by boys. Every car that came along was stopped by the obstruction, and when the car men got off to remove it they were liberally jeered and hooted.

This form of amusement was kept up for some time, when a motorman and conductor more cute than their fellows removed the obstruction from the rails and, instead of throwing it in the roadway, placed it in the car and took it along. About this time Lieutenant Peter Zang came on the scene, and the mischief-makers departed.

Much the same style of annoyance was adopted on Elm street, between the bridge and Washington avenue, only that a barrel filled with stones was used. The patrol wagon was again summoned, but on the arrival of the police the disturbers had departed.

A Pleasant Affair.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Spruks, of 812 Prospect avenue, entertained a number of friends at a progressive euchre party on Saturday evening. H. J. Spruks won the gentleman's first prize; Roland Duebler, gentleman's second prize, and Mrs. Jacob Milller, lady's second prize. After the games the guests were entertained by instrumental music, furnished by Edward Milller, and recitations by Miss Romaine Spruks. Refreshments were served, after which the guests left for their homes, having spent a very enjoyable evening.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Duebler, Mr. and Mrs. William Partridge, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Spruks, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Moore, Misses Elsie and Dora Duebler, Marguerite Miller, Romaine, Hazel and Verna Spruks, and Messrs. Roland Duebler, Edward Miller, John Huber, Willie and Charles Spruks.

Forgot to Square Accounts.

William Mitchell, a driver who has been in the employ of Schreiber Bros., ice dealers, all summer, got into serious trouble Saturday. Mitchell had been under suspicion for some time, and on Saturday one of the firm members accompanied him on the wagon to attend to collections. Before the day had gone far, Mr. Schreiber was satisfied that considerable money was unaccounted for, and he had a warrant sworn out for Mitchell's arrest on a charge of embezzlement.

He was given a hearing before Alderman Storr and the evidence presented was so conclusive that the offending ice man was held for court in the sum of $1,000. In default of bail, he was committed to the county jail.

Funeral of Edward Kahler.

Numerous friends of the late Edward Kahler thronged to the family residence, 113 Elm street, yesterday afternoon to pay a last tribute to the memory of a worthy Christian citizen. The services, which took place at the house, were conducted by Rev. E. J. Schmidt, Ph. D., who spoke of the life and character of the departed. The funeral cortege afterwards proceeded to the Pittston avenue cemetery, where interment was made. There were many floral tokens of sorrow placed around the grave, which were borne there by Walter McConnell and Jacob Berhauser.

The pall bearers were chosen from among life-long friends, as follows: Michael Kennedy, Joseph Schultz, Harry Hook, Bailey Cooper, John Greiner and Daniel Kullman.

Funeral of a Child.

The 5-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Herzog, whose death occurred Friday, as the result of a bad fall sustained a week ago, was laid at rest in St. Mary's German Catholic cemetery yesterday afternoon.

The funeral took place from the family residence, 413 Hickory street, where services were conducted by Rev. Peter Christ.

Stars Special Session.

Every member of the Star Social club was present at yesterday's meeting, which was held in Mirtz hall, 612 Pittston avenue. The session was devoted to perfecting arrangements for their annual ball, which takes place in Athletic hall Wednesday evening. The reports of the various committees, on music, tickets, refreshments, etc., were most encouraging.

This club is seven years old, and has increased steadily in popularity until now its social events are looked forward to as one of the season's events. The committee of arrangements is as follows: Jacob Kaestner, Eugene Claus, Charles Roth, William Rosar and David Lewis.

At the Y. W. C. A.

Mrs. L. M. Gates attended the Young Women's Christian association rooms, on Cedar avenue, at 3.45 yesterday afternoon and delivered a most interesting and instructive address to a large audience. Mrs. Gates took for her theme, "Convention Doings at Lancaster," and gave a detailed and vivid story of the progress during the past year of the Pennsylvania Young Women's Christian associations.

Miss Stahlheber also made an interesting address, which was attentively listened to by a very large audience.

LEGAL.

DANIEL M. STIMSON, executor of Willard Parker, deceased, and Theodore G. Wolfe and Everett Warren, executors of R. H. Throop, deceased, vs. Christine Walders, Elizabeth Walders Jay, William Jay, Emma Walders, Minnie Walders, August Walders, jr., guardian ad litem of Minnie Walders, a minor; Herman Walders, jr., and William G. C. Walders. In the court of common pleas of Lackawanna county, No. 1172, September term, 1901.

To the Defendants Above Named:

You are hereby notified that an action of ejectment has been brought against you by the plaintiffs above named for a lot of ground situated in the Borough of Dunmore, Lackawanna county, Pennsylvania, being lots numbered seven (7) and eight (8) in square or block number eight (8) and situated upon street called and named Jessup avenue, upon the plot of said property known as the allotment of the Sherwood farm, in said Borough of Dunmore, intended to be duly registered and recorded; said lots being each one hundred and sixteen feet (116) feet wide upon Jessup avenue, the same width in the rear, and two hundred and twenty-five (225) feet in depth; the right of possession and title to which said plaintiffs say is in them, and not in said defendants; and that on the twelfth day of October, 1901, the court of common pleas of Lackawanna county granted a rule upon you to appear and plead to said action, which said rule is returnable in said court on the twenty-third day of December, 1901, at 9 o'clock a. m.

You are therefore hereby notified to appear and plead to said action on or before said date, otherwise judgment by default will be entered against you, in accordance with the statutes for such purpose made and provided.
