The Church of England.

Sir: The Rev. Mr. Giffin, in his sermon last Sunday, made two statements with which I think no person acquainted with the religious life of London will agree. In the first instance, I says that the Church of England is doing notiing to evangelize London-in its comparative ligious life of the world today. I give it the second place because the Roman Catholic church, in its universality at least, holds the first. Any person who has lived in England or the English colonies knows what a stupendous force the Church of England is in its evangelical organivation, I am not here dealing with any other aspect of that great institution, its universities, its learned men, its historical traditions or its great prelates and doctors. The Church of England is evangelical in the truest sense of that ambiguous word. There are no severer critics of their own shortcomings than the clergymen of or more earnest workers in the cause of Chris-tianity and all that that implies, in its religious and social manifestation. If Dr. Gif-fin had visited the slums of Lendon, Liverpool.

Manchester or any of the large cities and in vestigated the work of the Church of England in its multitudinous manifestations, surely he would not make such a random and unfounded statement as that which he is reported to have made—that the Church of England is doing nothing to evangelize London. I mean by evangelization exactly what Dr. Giffin means by it.

England is that it is too sensuous; that it ap-peals to the senses rather than to the heart,

In fact, it is neither cold nor warm. It is Susquehanna, Oct. 29 -- A cat crossed the Eriestrack near Forest City, the engineer applied the brakes, and then got off and rubbed himself, and then the rail with a rabbit's foot.

'You may regard it as foolishness," he said, as we again flew along, "but you see now if I hadn't seen the cat we would have had an accident by this time. There was a time when I laughed at it, but I have learned better. Some time ago a cat crossed the track in front of me. My fireman begged me to stop and let him rub the rail, but I laughed at him. He vowed that we should have an accident, and, Fir, before we had gone five miles further, the engine jumped the track and did considerable damage. I hardly eseaned being killed, and since then have carried a rabbit's foot. When six white cats cross the track nothing can prevent a calamity, that is, if the engincer keeps on, but if he gets off everything may be all right." "Do the conductors believe in the rabbit-foot theory?" "Many of them do. Sometimes man hoots at the idea, but after awhile he is convinced, and gets him a foot On some roads and old claw is neces sary, and still on others nothing but

A friend of mine ran on the road and never had an accident. He went to a circus one night and cut off the tip end of a tiger's car. The beast howled terribly and died within fifteen minutes. The rabbit foot is the standard, and, as a rule, will do for the narrow-gauge roads. On the eastern roads beef-bone is the thing. When a road become known as a beef-bone road it is re garded as the best. Next is the goat-
