Assaulted and Robbed.

James Mack and Daniel Lenahan, residents of Keyser Valley, were arrested on a warrant yesterday, charged with assaulting and robbing John Carpenter, who is employed as a watchman at the new spike mill on Jackson street.

From what could be learned of the case, the men had been drinking in a hotel near the mill early Christmas morning and when Carpenter left and returned to the mill he was approached by the accused, whom he alleges assaulted him with a board and relieved him of $21.

Mack and Lenahan were apprehended by the police and locked up in the station house. They will be given a hearing this morning.

An Unprovoked Assault.

A stranger entered a North Main avenue drug store on Wednesday evening and asked the proprietor to call a cab for him. The druggist was prescriptive at the time, compounding a prescription, and kept the stranger waiting a few minutes.

The latter became enraged and when the druggist came out from behind the counter, he was struck in the face by his unwelcome visitor. Before assistance could be called the stranger escaped. The matter was reported to the police and an arrest may follow.

Bible School Exercises.

The Bible school of the Washburn Street Presbyterian church held their Christmas exercises last evening. The auditorium and Sunday school room being filled with people. A pleasing feature was the selections rendered by the school orchestra, under the direction of George Waters.

Misses Olwyn Jones and Salma Phillips sang a duet, "Hail to the King," and the primary department rendered a Christmas song. The rooms were then darkened, and stereoscopic views were presented by A. V. Bower. At the close, Santa Claus arrived and dis-

Rev. D. P. Jones at Utica.

Concerning the visit of Rev. D. P. Jones, of the Tabernacle Congregational church, to Utica, N. Y., recently, the Utica Daily Press, of December 23, had the following to say:

"Not in many years has the congregation of Bethesda church had the pleasure of listening to better or more forceful sermons than they did on the last two Sundays, when Rev. David P. Jones, of Scranton, Pa., occupied the pulpit. Mr. Jones' appeals are eloquent, effective and interesting and his sermons are full of inducements to sinners to embrace religion. His subject yesterday morning was Hebrews iv, 16, and in the evening he took for his theme Luke 23: 42. 'And the Lord said unto the servant, go out into the highways and the hedges, and constrain them to come in, that my house may be filled.' Among other things he said: First, the aim of the parable was to call all sinners, under all circumstances of life, unto Christ; second, the mission of the church is to teach all nations the principle of the life of Christ as the fundamental principle of success in all respects; third, that the church is working slowly but surely, but we should thank the Lord for his Gospel. It is the best way to meet the needs of men and women as sinners.' In his closing remarks Mr. Jones made a strong appeal to young men, and invited them to become members of the church before they are lost forever."

Heart Disease

Some Facts Regarding the Rapid Increase of Heart Trouble.

Heart trouble, at least among the Americans, is certainly increasing and while this may be largely due to the excitement and worry of American business life, it is more often the result of weak stomachs, of poor digestion.

Real organic disease is incurable, but not one case in a hundred of heart trouble is organic.

The close relation between heart trouble and poor digestion is because both organs are controlled by the same great nerves, the Sympathetic and Pneumogastric.

In another way, also the heart is affected by the form of poor digestion which causes gas fermentation from half digested food. There is a feeling of oppression and heaviness in the chest caused by pressure of the distended stomach on the heart and lungs, interfering with their action; hence arises palpitation and short breath.

Poor digestion also poisons the blood, making it thin and watery, which irritates and weakens the heart.

The most sensible treatment for heart trouble is to improve the digestion and to insure prompt food assimilation.

This can be done by the regular use after meals of some safe, pleasant and effective digestive preparation like Sturdt's Dyspepsia Tablets, which may be found at most drug stores, and which contains valuable, harmless digestive elements in a pleasant, convenient form.

It is safe to say that the regular persistent use of Sturdt's Dyspepsia Tablets at meal time will cure any form of stomach trouble except cancer of the stomach.

out on the right, I on the left, and a stranger in between. The latter began to look uneasy after we had gone about fifteen miles, and finally whispered to me: 'I am afraid I am about to be sick, sir; would you exchange places with me for a moment?' I could not make the exchange too quickly.

"The old fellow was a tight squeeze, but I patiently submitted. Five minutes passed, ten, twenty, forty, an hour. Not a sign from my friend. He seemed to be enjoying the scenery. I said at last: 'I have decided for you to say that you felt sick.'

"Yes, quite true; I had a dazed feeling of nausea. But the air out there appears to agree with me, and the feeling has passed off."

"Then you will give me back my seat?"

"Oh, not at all. This is an old trick I learned in New York; get anything you can in the way you can, and hold on to it."

Sentence One Too Short.

For nearly half a century the late William W. Evans headed the list of American "antidivine" spouters on which very ground, in a pun worthy of his victim, he was once trapped by a superior officer, relates the Youth's Companion in a presidential tour through the south, more than twenty years ago. Mr. Evans accompanied President and Mrs. Hayes, taking upon himself the tedious duty of speaking among the car platform. At one place the travelers were called out before breakfast, and as President Hayes appeared he was loudly cheered. After a few words he introduced his secretary of state, who waited for his own customary quota of applause. Some were forthcoming, however, and a little passed Mr. Evans' eye.

"You cannot close before breakfast," said down.

"Evidently" cried the president, jumping to his feet. "Mr. Evans cannot speak until after dinner," he began, "but I am glad that followed the engineer unwittingly relieved the situation by stating the train.

"The young people of the party laid a wager with Mr. Evans that he could not make a pun on each town where he spoke, pinning their lips of victory on the name Chattanooga. As the crowd at that station clamored for a speech, the secretary placed a lucky guess as to what only a few Chattanooga remarks!

"Still less mandatory, perhaps, was his last note at a Georgia station. The engineers of even a special train could make long stops, impossible, yet much of the allotted time was everywhere occupied by local brass bands playing "Hail to the Chief," and by the mayor's usual welcome. One of the president's sons surreptitiously arranged with the conductor to start the train very gently the moment the band stopped playing.

Mr. Evans had reached the middle of one of his famous sentences, when he perceived that the train was slipping out.

"I have often been criticized for my long sentences," he began, "but I can never," raising his voice with each word, "make a sentence long enough to reach—back—to—you!"

A band of laughter and applause trickled on the train, for that time, in truth, the brilliant secretary of state spoke "after dinner."
