In aspiring to this office I stand solely upon my own merits, representing no faction or clique of the party.

In the past I have not seen fit to seek public office but I now earnestly solicit the support of the party. If nominated and elected I shall endeavor to administer the affairs of the office without fear or favor. Yours for success,

J. N. Geller.

A Former Carbonian.

Harry J. Forbes, formerly of this city but recently of Omaha, Neb., where he has been private secretary to Mechanical Engineer F. N. Hibbitts, has resigned his position there to accept a more lucrative one in New York city, where his mother lives. He passed through here yesterday and stopped over to see old friends, and will proceed to New York this morning.

Political Announcements.

To the Republican Voters:

You are no doubt aware that I am a candidate for the Republican nomination for city treasurer. Owing to the short time remaining before primary day it will, perhaps, be impossible for me to personally visit every voter in the city and for that reason I hope you will consider this a personal appeal on my part for your support. Your vote or any other favor you may extend will be appreciated very highly. As regards to this position I shall by a fearless and determinedly to promptly fulfill the true attempt to show my qualifications and the confidence reposed in me by the taxpayers. In the collection of the city taxes, one of the treasurer's most important duties, I promise you there shall be absolutely no discriminations. Yours for success,

J. N. Geller.

Prediction Made by Rev. J. J. Curran, of Wilkes-Barre, President of the C. T. A. U. in His Talk at the First Quarterly Convention of the First District—The Tendency of the Times—Other Convention Matters.

The feature of the first quarterly convention of the First district of the Second Diocesan Union of America, the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America, was held in St. Rose hall yesterday afternoon, was the address made to the delegates by Rev. J. J. Curran, of Wilkes-Barre, president of the Diocesan union.

"T. P. O'Connor," continued Father Curran, "declared a few days ago that England was degenerated in the social scale. Drunkenness was fearfully on the increase; it extended into every branch of society, and if the influence was not checked, twenty-five years from now, Mr. O'Connor predicted, no one but a total abstainer could hold a responsible position."

Saloon Not the Cause.

Father Curran, in the course of his talk, expressed the belief that is not shared by a good part of the members of the union. In fact, he confessed that the belief was not always held by himself. This was that the saloon was not the cause. It was the effect of the drinking habit. Man's habit, his desire for drink was the cause. This conclusion was reached, Father Curran said, since he became active in the cause of the Catholic Total Abstinence union and had better opportunities to study social conditions.

Father Curran, in expressing his opinion on the present social conditions in America, declared that the student of affairs could not help but feel that a great change must come in the customs of society. "There is such a downward tide," said he, "that the prediction that I am going to make, I feel certain you will see fulfilled before the end of fifteen years. The unprecedented prosperity that we are enjoying entertain on a broad scale, such as will be true of this week. In the first place the customary parade on the opening will be "cut out." Whatever expense saved and turned to good advantage in providing entertainment for fair patrons. The feature of the week will be the Mozart orchestra which will provide dance music. The dance has been voted the most popular of fair diversions and with this in mind the orchestra was procured to play the most popular waltzes and two-steps.

There will be an array of articles to be disposed of by chance, chief among them $25 in gold, the chances on which will be ten cents.

Political Announcements.

To the Republican Voters:

You are no doubt aware that I am a candidate for the Republican nomination for city treasurer. Owing to the short time remaining before primary day it will, perhaps, be impossible for me to personally visit every voter as a nation has caused much money to drift or be diverted into wrong channels. Men who cannot think for themselves are misusing their earnings. They are turning them into the grog-shop. Drink and consequent depravity are on the increase. With the continuation of prosperity it will increase the tax load of the great men, the thinking men, the men in the heads of trust and the greatest masters of thought, will employ nobody, they will be compelled to employ the man who is a total abstainer. They will become so disgusted that they, themselves, will take the pledge. This is the prediction that I will make. The total abstinence movement will come to be regarded as the grandest thing ever inaugurated. It will come to be regarded by these men as the savior of the country; the pledge will be the salvation of America.

"T. P. O'Connor," continued Father Curran, "declared a few days ago that England was degenerated in the social scale. Drunkenness was fearfully on the increase; it extended into every branch of society, and if the influence was not checked, twenty-five years from now, Mr. O'Connor predicted, no one but a total abstainer could hold a responsible position."

This conclusion was reached, Father Curran said, since he became active in the cause of the Catholic Total Abstinence union and had better opportunities to study social conditions.

Father Curran said some things startling about the saloonkeepers and their bartenders forming themselves into labor unions. They are so friendly to the working man, so solicitous of him, that they unite in order to appeal more strongly for his money. It was amusing, he said
