Mr. Simrell's promotion is, in the strict sense of the word, a reward of merit, as he has been one of the leading solicitor-collectors of the schools. This is no small distinction, when it is known that there are at present over 100 men employed by the International Correspondence schools in all parts of the United States and Canada.

Mr. Simrell, in his new position, will have charge of the men working in Northeastern Pennsylvania. He will be succeeded as solicitor-collector by George Gelatt, who has been one of the schools' most progressive students. Mr. Gelatt was a pipe-fitter and machinist. He took a course in mechanical drawing with the schools, and through it secured a position as draftsman with the Lackawanna Iron and Steel company. Having been a successful student, there is every reason to believe that Mr. Gelatt will make a successful representative of the schools.

Attorney Richard J. Bourke is rapidly achieving fame as an orator of brilliant attainments, and is becoming recognized as one of the best extemporaneous speakers in the city. His latest triumph was a little address which he delivered a few nights ago at the banquet of the University of Pennsylvania Alumni dinner, in which he combined delicate wit and serious thought with a facility of expression and grace of delivery that charmed his hearers and provoked loud and continued applause.

Another recent speech of Mr. Bourke's which has produced a great deal of favorable comment, was the speech he made before common council a week or two ago in opposition to the running of the North End Street Railway company's lines out Wyoming avenue. Mr. Bourke's arguments may not have been full of merit, but there were none who were not impressed with the concise, terse and clever manner in which they were presented. Mr. Bourke is a prominent member of the Thirtieth regiment, being adjutant of the First battalion, with the rank of first lieutenant, and is one of the most popular members of the command.

CONGRESSMAN CONNELL ON THE WORK OF CONGRESS.

Will Leave for Washington This Morning, Pausing at Harrisburg for a Conference—Gratified at the Interest Shown in His Golden Wedding—Will Push His Bills Now Before Congress—Final Views Concerning the New Street Railway Franchises.

Congressman Connell expects to leave this morning for Washington. He will pause at Harrisburg for a conference with Governor Stone and Attorney General Elkin. Both he and Mrs. Connell have recovered from the fatigue incident to the celebration of their golden wedding. Speaking of that he said yesterday:

"The interest shown by our many friends in our fiftieth marriage anniversary and the many kindly expressions and tokens of good will from people in all the walks of life have touched my wife and myself most deeply. We appreciate them more than words can say. I want to take this public opportunity to return our sincerest thanks."

"What programme have you arranged for congressional work?" was asked of the congressman. He replied: "PROGRAMME OF CONGRESS. 'I am naturally most interested in the bills I introduced. They were, you remember, bills to punish anarchy, restrict immigration and protect from murderous attack the president and first president of the United States, the members of his cabinet and justices of the Supreme court. As soon as I return to Washington I intend to see the chairman of the various committees to which these bills were referred and do what I can to get them favorably reported. It is probable that the best features of the several bills on each of these subjects which have been introduced will be brought together and reported. That will be satisfactory to me."

"The session will also have to consider the shipping bill, the purpose of which—to restore our merchant marine—has my heartiest sympathy; the isthmian canal bill, involving a choice between the Nicaragua and Panama routes; the question of granting reciprocity to Cuba; a Pacific cable bill and probably other matters recommended in the president's message. Those, with the regular appropriation bills, will fill out a big programme for one session and doubtless hold us until well along into the summer months. On all of these measures I am with the administration."

THOSE FRANCHISES.

"Have you anything to say about the street railway franchises?" "Very little that has not already been said. They are now before councils and the people. They promise a good street railway at the earliest possible moment under as favorable terms as we see our way clear from a business standpoint to offer. If the people want a good service this is their chance to get it."

"It has been suggested, Mr. Connell, that the enactment of these franchises would open a way to the employment at good wages of many men formerly in the employ of the Scranton Railway company. Have you anything to say on that point?" "Only this: My record as an employer of labor is before the public. While I have anything to say about an enterprise it will pay as good wages and make as favorable terms of employment as the conditions of its business will warrant. I have never believed in gouging my men; and if these franchises are passed I shall use my influence to get for the good men to be employed on the new lines as good wages as are paid for similar service anywhere in the country."

Mr. Connell will be accompanied to Washington by his private secretary, John R. Williams. Later he will be joined by Mrs. Connell. They will reside in the apartments in the Shoreham and the congressman, as before.
