KNIGHTS OF MALTA.

Malta Knights came out in large numbers to greet Grand Commander Sir Elsiea S. Formwald, of Bloomsburg, and the other officers of the Grand Commandery of Pennsylvania, at the three official stations that occurred last week. The first was held in the council chamber of St. Elmo commandery, Juniata street and Germantown avenue, Philadelphia, on January 13, and was attended by the grand commander, Grand Senior Warden Samuel L. Barrett, of Delta; Grand Sentinel George F. Brooks, of Lewistown; Grand Recorder Sir George H. Pierce, Supreme Recorder Frank Gray, Supreme Sentinel Alfred B. Jones, Deputies George Harvey and George D. Brown. Delegates were present from all the commanderies in Philadelphia, and the meeting was the scene of the largest demonstration held in the city for years. A fine collation followed in an adjoining hall.

The past commander's degree was conferred on twenty-three candidates on January 14 in the council chamber of Imperial Commandery, No. 225, at Chester, with the grand officers present, and representatives from the five commanderies of Delaware county, and from Wilmington, Del. The attendance was very large, and after the ceremonies, all proceeded to Horwath's hall, where a collation was served, and a large meeting of the members of No. 225 had assembled to meet the grand commander, who delivered an interesting address, which was followed by a number of speeches, songs and stories.

Wednesday evening, January 15, was devoted to an official visit to Bethany commandery, No. 39, at Ambley, Montgomery county. A number of commissions accompanied the grand officers from Philadelphia, and a delegation from St. Bernard commandery, No. 49, came from Quakertown. The evening was most delightfully spent, and when it closed all proceeded to the hotel hall, where a roast duck supper was spread.

Welsh preached a special sermon to a large delegation of companions from the Lancaster commanderies, on Sunday evening, January 12, in his church at Petersburg, Lancaster. Bohemond commandery, No. 277, at Reading, on January 15, conferred the Red Cross and Sepulchre degree in the new Academy hall on forty-four novitiates. They used the paraphernalia of Friendship commandery, which cost over $1,500. By invitation, 1,000 guests, chiefly ladies, viewed the beautiful hall just before it was closed for the ceremonies. Sir H. T. Holburn was sovereign commander. Friendship commandery's orchestra and glee club of twelve added greatly to the impressiveness of the work. Many visiting companions were present from distant parts of the state, and the event proved one of great interest and success.

SUDDEN DEATH OF HON. W. H. JESSUP

Ex-Judge W. H. Jessup died suddenly of heart disease yesterday morning, in his apartments at the home of Miss Mary Mattes, 119 Jefferson avenue. He was entirely unexpected and came as a shock to not only his family and friends, but to this entire community, in which he had come to be regarded as one of the most distinguished men Scranton has ever been honored with.

Wednesday he was actively engaged in his law office and about 3:30 o'clock and yesterday he was to have appeared in an argument before the Superior court.

With his daughter, Miss Louise Jessup, he attended the lecture on Alaska, given by Rev. H. Lukens at the First Presbyterian church Wednesday evening, and retired about 10 o'clock without making any complaint of illness. It was his custom to sleep with a window of his bed room open and to rise upon waking to close it, that the room might be warmed before it was time to get up and dress. Yesterday morning he awoke about 7:30 o'clock and closed the window. On his way back to bed he began to cough so violently that his wife was awakened. As the coughing continued, Mrs. Jessup became alarmed and, lighting the gas, called her daughter. The judge sat up in bed and continued to cough more violently. At first he said in answer to his wife's queries, that there was nothing the matter, but after a time he said he thought his heart was affected.

SANK BACK AND DIED.

Five minutes after he sat down on the bed he suddenly sank backwards and in a short time expired. Dr. J. E. O'Brien and Dr. H. V. Logan, who were summoned to the room, first alarm was felt, responded with all haste, but did not arrive until after death had ensued.

The news of his death was received with expressions of the deepest sorrow in all circles. While it is true he had passed by two years the allotted term of years and ten, he was yet a vigorous man physically and as to mentality, it might be said he was never more vigorous. His erect carriage, ruddy cheeks, clear complexion and bright eye bespoke for him many more years of activity. It was therefore all the more shocking to hear that his end had come.

SKETCH OF DECEASED.

Hon. William Hunting Jessup has long been known as one of the most able and distinguished lawyers of Pennsylvania. He was born in Montrose, Susquehanna county, Jan. 29, 1829. He was a descendant of the Jessup family which immigrated from England to Rhode Island about the middle of the seventeenth century. He was the eldest of five sons of Hon. William Jessup, LL. D., who came to Northampton, Pennsylvania from South Hampton, Long Island, in 1818, and made his home in Montrose for the remainder of his life. The elder Judge Jessup was president judge of the district composed of the counties of Luzerne, Wayne, Pike, Monroe and Susquehanna for many years. The two brothers of Judge Jessup next younger than himself are the Rev. Henry H. Jessup, D. D., and Rev. Samuel Jessup, D. D., who have been for thirty-three and twenty-six years respectively and still are missionaries under the care of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions at Beirut, Syria. The only other survivor of the brothers and sisters is Miss Fanny M. Jessup, of Montrose.

ated Abraham Lincoln for his second term, his father having been a member of the convention which first nominated Lincoln. He was a delegate to the convention which nominated General Grant to the presidency in 1868, and was one of the delegates at large from Pennsylvania to the convention which named Mr. Blaine in 1884. Though prevented from enlisting during the war of the Rebellion by his large business responsibilities and the necessary care of an aged and infirm father, he was unceasingly active in the support of the government, giving largely of time and money, and during the invasion of Pennsylvania in 1862-63, he was active in service as major of the Twenty-eighth regiment of Pennsylvania volunteer militia. In 1863, he was appointed by President Lincoln assessor of internal revenue for the Twelfth collection district of Pennsylvania, one of the richest districts of the state. In 1871, he was commissioned by the governor, John W. Geary, major general of the Tenth Division of the National Guard of Pennsylvania. He was never an office-seeker, but was always ready to serve his neighborhood, his state or his country in any capacity, however humble or however distasteful to the full extent of his power and ability. He was active in all public enterprises, one of his latest engagements being a masterly address delivered before a public meeting called by the Citizens' Alliance in Scranton about two weeks ago, in which the laws governing the relations between labor and capital were most fully and thoroughly expounded.

HIS PRIVATE CHARACTER.

All Judge Jessup's personal and professional qualities and achievements seem at this time of small moment compared to the beauty and purity of which he has been an active elder for over forty years. He has constantly appeared in the ecclesiastical courts of his church from the lowest to the highest, and has taken an active interest in every enterprise of the church at home and abroad. He was for over twenty-five years the superintendent of the Sunday school of the Montrose church, resigning only because of the removal of his residence and within a few weeks of his death he accepted the appointment as teacher of a Bible class in the First Presbyterian church in Scranton. His personal life, both at home, in his business and in all the relations of life, was marked by the utmost simplicity, purity, frankness and transparency. No breath of suspicion of anything inconsistent with his character as a professed believer in the Gospel of Jesus Christ has ever been heard, and he leaves behind him a memory for purity and usefulness and helpfulness to his fellow-men which will long survive him. In all these respects he followed with singular completeness the example of his illustrious father.

BEGAN STUDY OF LAW.

Immediately after his graduation he commenced the study of law and was admitted to the bar in November, 1851, at the first term of court held by his father, with whom he immediately entered into partnership in the practice of law and has actively pursued it ever since, having at the very outset a very wide and important clientele in all the northern part of Pennsylvania. He entered the practice of law in the greatest zeal, earnestness and thoroughness, and soon became and always continued to be one of the most prominent and successful lawyers in this part of the state. His practice extended throughout the state in the state courts and those of the United States and he has been everywhere known as an accurate, thorough and able lawyer.

In 1877 he was appointed president judge of the Thirty-fourth district to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Judge Street. He served upon the bench of that district until 1879, his administration of the office being distinguished for the clearness of his decisions and the rapid dispatch of the business of the various courts. As a judge he was remarkable for his ready comprehension and quick recognition of the essential points in cases brought before him, for his thorough knowledge of all the branches of the law relating to the same and for his absolute and unswerving impartiality in his administration. On retiring from the bench he resumed the practice of the law, with his residence at Montrose, but his practice widely extended over the state.

REMOVED TO THIS CITY.

About 1889 he removed to Scranton and entered into partnership with Isaac J. Post, taking the place in the firm of Hon. Alfred Hand, who had been recently elevated to the bench. He has ever since had as his principal office in Scranton, having as partners successively, Mr. Post, Horace E. Hand, esq., and his son, William H. Jessup, Jr., esq., with whom he was still associated at the time of his death, and the firm name of Jessup & Jessup. The business of his later years was largely corporation practice, and he was one of the most active lawyers and advocates in this part of the state up to the very time of his death. Only last October he was the leading counsel for the defendant in one of the most important and longest cases ever tried before the circuit court of the United States here, that of the Russell heirs against the Delaware and Hudson company, the outcome of the case being a complete victory for the clients. His practice in the appellate courts was always largely and his breadth of grasp of legal principles, his accurate knowledge of the development of the common law, the decisions of the state and United States courts, and the statutes, made him one of the most powerful members of the bar in all cases involving accurate knowledge and exhaustive research.

WAS A REPUBLICAN.

In politics, Judge Jessup was an ardent Republican, having assisted in organizing the Republican party in his native town, in November, 1854, and every campaign since that time he has taken the stump for the maintenance of his principles, and is known throughout the state as one of the finest eloquent and popular political orators. He personally represented his district in the convention which nominated Abraham Lincoln for his second term, his father having been a member of the convention which first nominated Lincoln. He was a delegate to the convention which nominated General Grant to the presidency in 1868, and was one of the delegates at large from Pennsylvania to the convention which named Mr. Blaine in 1884.

One of the Texas Friends of Representative Cooper met him yesterday. "What is it?" he asked. "You smoke, don't you?" he asked. "Sometimes," said Cooper. "Take this," remarked the Texan.
