TODAY'S ATTRACTIONS.
LYCEN—Creston Clarke and company. Afternoon and night.

CRESTON CLARKE TODAY.
Creston Clarke, who will appear at a matinee today as David Garrick and tonight as Richelieu, opened his current season in Philadelphia after his first performance the Record has this to say of him: "A Creston Clarke is not only a genuine event for the host of local admirers of the dramatic art, but also a notable role of both comedy and tragedy. His gait has a wide range, as he holds this sort of comedy (John Reher) and as his repertory of tragedy (Richard III.)."

STAGE NOTES.
Marie Cahill, the clever comedienne recently seen in "The Chaperones," was one of the original skirt dancers in this country and graduated from that line of effort into her present position.
