DYES FROM INSECTS.

Animal Production.

Of great repute and of more importance than lac dye is cochineal, which is the source of artists' carmine and carmine lake, while, when precipitated with sale of tin, it also yields a splendid scarlet. The cochineal insect, of which the female, like that of the nearly allied lac insect, alone yields the dye, is originally a native of Mexico, where it is parasitic on the leaves of the prickly pear. The males of the coccus cacti, as the species is called, are minute insects, furnished with well developed wings, feathered atennae and a long pair of hair-like processes at the other hand, the female is a repulsivelooking, wingless creature, with very Ir. and Mrs. Chandler Cole, of New short posterior hairs, and nearly double Mrs. V. C. Decker, who has been adhere tightly to the smooth surface of the fleshy leaves of the prickly pear, and are not unlike small purple wood lice in general appearance.

the cultivators stretch out on the ground pieces of linen at the foot of the plants, and detach the cochineals from them, brushing the plants with a rather hard brush or scraping them off with a blunt knife. If the season be favorable the operation may be repeated three times in the course of a year on the same plantation. The insects thus collected are killed by dipping into bolling water, by being put into an oven or by being placed on a plate of hot iron. When withdraw from the boiling water they are placed on strainers in any airy position, first in the sun and afterward in the shade. In commerce three sets of cochineal are recognized; first, the mastique, of a reddish color, with a more or less abundant glaucous powder; second, the noir, ten inches of snow has fallen between | and third the sylvester, which is smaller and of a reddish color. This last description, which is gathered from wild cacti, is the most highly esteemed of all. Each year there are imported into France 200,000 kilograms of cochineal insects, which represent a value of

to a rope suspended from a telegraph poleon Central Row, Friday noon, attracted the attention of a good sized crowd. The animal was said to be owned by a man living on State street. A boy wishing to test the dog's grit, fastened the rope to the pole about ten feet from the ground and called the animal's attention to it. The dog reached the top after several attempts and for five minutes hung to it, trying constantly to work the rope loose. Chadler E. Miller, secretary of the Connecticut Humane society, appeared on the scene and tried to ascertain the name of the owner of the dog. All efforts to coax the animal down were of no avail. It was evident that he would hold on until obliged to drop from sheer exhaustion. One young man, whose pleasure at the performance turned into sympathy reached up and cut the rope. As he did so the dog bit him on the right thumb. When Mr. Miller learned that the dog climbed up the pole without assistance he walked away and the crowd dispersed.

ABOUT CATARRH CURES.

The Reason Why Inhalers and Local Applications Are Useless,

For many years catarrh was considered to be a local disease and was treated entirely by local remedies. ointments, powders, sprays and inhalers, and nearly all of these gave a temporary relief, but a genuine high mass was held at St. Mary's church. Interment in St. Mary's ceme-

> The sensible and successful treatment is to remove the catarrhal poison from the system by regulating the liver and purliying the blood, and this can only be done by an internal remedy, which should consist of antiseptics and remedies to act vigorously on the blood and liver.

> The best preparation of this kind which fills all the requirements of a safe constitutional treatment is Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, composed of Blood Root, Red Gum and similar wholesome antiseptics, which are absolutely safe to take into the stomach and which act upon the liver, stomach > and mucuous membrane. Stuart's Catarrh Tablets are large, pleasant tasting lozenges, to be slowly dissolved in the mouth, thus reaching the mucous membrane and wind-pipe and finally reaching the stomach. Dr. Edmondson, in speaking of the new treatment for catarrh, says: "I have accomplished the most satisfactory results in all forms of catarrh of the head, throat, bronchial tubes, as well as eatarrh of the stomach and liver, by using nothing else but Stuart's Catarrh Tablets. I long since threw aside sprays and inhalers as being inconvenient and at the best mere tem-
