OBITUARY SKETCH OF THE LATE REV. WM. EDGAR.

It Was Read in the Providence Methodist Episcopal Church on Sunday Last, by Rev. George A. Cure, the Pastor—The Splendid Career of the Dead Clergyman Pictured—Concert Tonight for the Benefit of Y. W. C. A.—Mrs. Gomer Games Surprised.

In the Providence Methodist Episcopal church last Sunday an obituary sketch of the late William Edgar was read by Rev. George A. Cure, before the congregation. Rev. Mr. Edgar was at one time pastor of the Providence church. The sketch is published by request, and is as follows:

The beloved and honored subject of this sketch was born in New York city, February 24, 1855. His first fifteen years of life were spent in that great metropolis. He passed through the grammar and high schools of the city, and learned many of the deeper lessons of the great including life, Wall street, with its crowd of railroad steamship lines, mining and manufacturing interests covering the national map; Broadway and other streets, with the great establishments supplying goods to the whole country; Castle Garden, with its babel of human tongues; the rush and crush at the depots and ferries; the millions of suffering from the shames of the poor were all woven into his life, by the Master who was preparing the youth for a career of usefulness and honor.

At fifteen years of age he turned away, regretfully from a more extended course of study, and became a bread winner for himself and the parental home, going, through the influence of a friend to Columbus, where he became a clerk in a store. The training and culture imparted by the throngs of people whom he met and bargained with were not so scholastic as those of the college, but they were of inestimable worth in training him to deal with all classes of people.

His store experience, however, was not the most valuable gain in Columbus. During his first winter in that city he passed through a gracious revival, and in his thought came consciously under the influence of God. Like another faithful one before him, he asked that most reasonable question, "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?" The result was his conversion.

The minister who conducted the meetings was the Rev. David H. Moore, afterward one of the bishops of the Methodist Episcopal church. From that time till his return to New York city, a period of about two years, he taught a Sunday school class in the Ohio State penitentiary. His knowledge of criminal life in his native city and of the methods of her reform missions, made his labors here especially valuable. Returning to New York, he at once accepted of Franklin street mission and became one of the workers, though only seventeen years of age. He afterward joined the force at the Wesleyan mission, under the justly celebrated Rev. McConley. The generosity of such work—carried on as a thank offering for God while supporting himself by other means—has been a lifelong memory, and his efforts gradually opened to him the wider field of the Christian ministry; and, at twenty years of age, we find him honored by a local preaching license, and admitted to the Wyoming conference in the spring of 1883, and stationed at Dunstur, N. Y. His services on this field opened a more desirable place the following spring, at Monticello, where he remained until the appointment of his pastorate there was made. From that time till his death he was married to Miss Mary E. Rogers, of New York city, a young woman of excellent judgment and cultured mind, who was a true helpmeet and co-laborer. The attractive home life and winning spirit of Mrs. Edgar cannot be overestimated in summing up Mr. Edgar's life work. Two years before his death he was appointed to a pastorate in the Lackawanna valley, and Mr. Edgar was called to Dunmore, Pa., where his life and labors were continued until a fatal illness. The middle aged and older people soon learned to love and trust him, the young people were enthralled by his personality, and the work of the church prospered. His congregation probably doubled during his four years in Dunmore; and the beautiful new church edifice, which he left, made that charge a desirable appointment. He was a true pastor, with an unusual cordiality, when they were stationed there two years ago, and stood by them heroically and lovingly through the shadows that soon gathered over him. Only a few weeks had passed in the new field, when Mr. Edgar was prostrated with a dangerous attack of appendicitis. He lingered a few days on the border between life and death, and recovered when he was removed to Scranton. Mrs. Edgar's health, impaired greatly when she left Scranton, declined rapidly through the fall months, and death followed in January of last year. Her husband, who had passed over his loss, held himself reluctantly to work, and blessing fell on his church in Oswego as well as elsewhere. Overwork, however, and a recurrence of appendicitis laid him low, and he left this world of so many triumphs to join the company of the overcomers in heaven.

NEW ROUTE INTO AFRICA. Steamers and Porters to Connect the Sea with Lake Tanganyika. From the New York Sun. A company has been organized in Germany under the name of the Central African Lakes Company to create a regular transport service from the coast to Lake Nyassa and thence to Lake Tanganyika, employing 8,000 native carriers. The company will carry goods for the German government, for the stations of Congo Free State in the southeastern part of its territory and for the numerous missionary and trading posts that are distributed over the country. The advantage of this route is the large amount of water transportation it affords. Vessels from Europe may unload their cargoes at Chinde in the Zambezi delta and river boats will carry the freight up the Zambezi and its Shire tributary to the rapids in that water. A portage of sixty miles will then be required. At the head of the rapids the freight will be transferred to steamboats bound for the head of Lake Nyassa, 300 miles away. Another portage of 200 miles will then be required to the foot of Lake Tanganyika, whence German steamboats will be able to deliver the freight at ports along the thousand miles of Tanganyika coast. The land portage along the old caravan route between Zanibar and Tanganyika is 500 miles in length. The new route will involve only 200 miles of land portage, and will thus affect a large saving of time and expense. The development of their great territory in East Africa will doubtless demand from the Germans the building of a railroad straight from the Zanibar coast to Tanganyika. The route which they now propose to utilize is but opened because the railroad which the British have completed from the Indian ocean to Victoria Nyanza
