

JURY CAUSES A COMMOTION

UNPRECEDENTED IN THE ANNALS OF COURT.

By Staying Out Twenty Minutes Longer They Could Have Earned $4 Apiece More, but in the Face of This and the Fact That They Were Violating a Long Standing Custom They Came in with a Verdict—A Novel Complaint—Other Court Matters.

Officials, clerks, janitors, scrub women and pretty much everybody else about the court house, yesterday afternoon at 3:55, rushed in from court room No. 2, to verify for themselves what each at first thought could be nothing more than a wild-eyed rumor.

From time immemorial, a jury which went out on the last day of a week's session of court failed, invariably, to effect an agreement until after court had adjourned for the day. Some explained this invariable occurrence by pointing out that the jurors, feeling that they were no longer needed for other cases, took plenty of time to the consideration of the case in hand, and that the agreements quite as invariably were reached a short time after adjournment was attributed to chance and accident.

Some would explain the invariable occurrence by pointing out that the jurors, by remaining out until the judge went home, could seal their verdict, report it the next morning and get an extra day's pay for ten or fifteen minutes' work. These latter explanations, however, let it be said, found few to accept their theory.

But, be the cause what it may, a jury, yesterday, broke the heretofore invariable rule. It retired about 4 o'clock, after the other jurors had been discharged for the week, and when retiring was told by Judge Wheaton that he would have to leave at 4:15, and that if it did not reach a verdict before that time it should report its verdict on Saturday morning. This meant that the jury need only stay out until a little after 4:15, and get two days' extra pay for coming around Saturday morning and handing up their finding.

At 3:50 a rap on the jury room door awoke Tipstaff Boland, who was waiting in a chair outside, ready to assure that he would not be disturbed for at least half an hour. When the foreman told him the jury had agreed and was ready to report, the tipstaff looked at his watch, then at the foreman and said, "What?" The foreman of the what was such that it can not be punctuated with any degree of positiveness. Possibly an explanation mark would be nearer correct than one of interrogation.

Mr. Boland, when convinced that the jury really wanted to throw away four dollars a head, went down and apprised Judge Wheaton, and he came in to receive the verdict.

Word of what had happened spread through the court house like an albatross of fire, and in an instant every stairway was choked with the crowd that flocked to see if the thing could be really true and, if it was true, what manner of men had been guilty of it.

As the verdict was being taken, the crowd looked on in wonder, and when the jurors left the box to file out into the corridor and disperse, the crowd made way for them and followed them with intent gaze, as if they were some sort of beings different from the ordinary. The jurors were:

John Simpson, merchant, Scranton, J. E. Parrell, superintendent, Scranton, Julius J. Foster, civil engineer, Scranton, Henry J. Carr, librarian, Scranton, C. W. Edwards, iron merchant, Scranton, M. B. Sherman, carpenter, Dalton, E. B. Morse, manufacturer, Scranton, Thomas H. Barrett, engineer, Dickson City, Peter Ramer, iron merchant, Scranton, B. E. Miller, undertaker, Daltville, E. S. Price, miner, Scranton, John Moffitt, agent, Dunmore.

The case they had to deal with was a slender suit growing out of a neighbor's quarrel. Caroline Hines was the plaintiff, and William Sames, the defendant. A verdict for the plaintiff in the sum of $125 was awarded.

The motion of Attorneys Price and Hannah for a new trial was granted, and a verdict for the defendant in the cost of Thomas Davis et al. against A. R. Russell was allowed by Judge Wheaton, on the ground that the suit was not brought within six years from the date of the cause of action. The suit was to recover treble damages for 100,000 tons of coal alleged to have been illegally mined by Russell from a coal tract in Blakely, which he had leased to the plaintiff.

The damages case of Mrs. Mary Ann Walsh and children against the Borough of Winton was settled in Judge Edwards' court. The plaintiff is to receive $200.

In Judge Newcomb's court, a verdict of $125 was awarded the plaintiff in the case of the Lackawanna Woodworking company against St. Mark's Evangelical Lutheran church. The plaintiff sued for a balance of $214 on a contract for lumber.

A verdict of $125 in favor of the plaintiff was directed by Judge Newcomb in the case of Calvin Freeman against Norton Wagner. A non-suit was granted in the case of Floyd Webb against Henry Connor, because of the non-appearance of the defendant.

Court adjourned over Good Friday, to meet at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Scott's Novel Complaint. Patrick Scott, of Pig street, through

A Dangerous Disease. Croup is dangerous, but there is timely warning. The danger signal is hoarseness.

A day or two before the attack the child becomes hoarse, then a rough cough appears. The following night the child has croup.

It can be prevented—it can be cured. There is a remedy—a safe one, and sure, too. It never fails. It is called Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Given, as soon as the child becomes hoarse, or even after the rough cough appears, it will prevent the attack. It has done so thousands of times and has never been known to fail. For sale by all druggists.
