

NORTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA

PITTSTON.

Special to the Scranton Tribune. Pittston, April 1.—Miss Minnie Crocker, of Cornwall street, will be united in marriage on April 5 to Miss Minnie Crocker, of Lehighton.

FOREST CITY.

Special to the Scranton Tribune. Forest City, April 1.—The Welsh Congregational church took in over $700 by their fair in the opera house last week, and over $500 will be left after the expenses have been paid.

HALLSTEAD.

Special to the Scranton Tribune. Hallstead, April 1.—Mrs. J. Brown spent Sunday with friends in Brooklyn. Charles Crook was out of town on business, Saturday.

PICTURE PUZZLE.

In this picture there is another man and his wife. Can you find them?

TUNKHANNOCK.

Special to the Scranton Tribune. Tunkhannock, April 1.—The Wyoming Telephone company has come into new headquarters, and the present office is in better condition and to extend their lines to other points during the coming season.

FACTORYVILLE.

Special to the Scranton Tribune. Factoryville, April 1.—The borough council will hold its regular meeting this (Wednesday) evening at 8 o'clock. The court calendars for April term have been printed, and are ready for distribution.

BRADFORD COUNTY.

Special to the Scranton Tribune. Towanda, April 1.—E. S. Ryan, doing business as merchant at Gillet, has been arrested by Deputy Marshal G. C. Hollow on a warrant issued at Philadelphia, charging him with obtaining goods to the amount of $27 by misrepresenting himself.

THOMPSON.

Special to the Scranton Tribune. Thompson, April 1.—Allen D. Miller, after a week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Miller, returned to his studies at Wyoming seminary this afternoon.

Mr. Holford refuses to have any interview whatever for publication. By good authority it has been reported that the Empire Bridge company, including all the bridge companies in New York state, expects to enlarge its plant in Elmira and at Horseheads.

The Union Veterans' association of the Wyoming Methodist conference will hold a camp-fire in the G. A. R. hall, at Waverly, on the evening of April 11. The position of yardmaster at the Erie yards in Waverly has been dispensed with, and now J. S. Carroll, the station agent, fills that position in connection with his regular work.

That the late Maurice Thompson did not write "Alice of Old Vincennes" with an idea of its being dramatized will be vouched for by those who read the book and see "Alice of Old Vincennes" as played by Virginia Harwood at the Lyceum last. Many of the best drawn characters of the book are entirely omitted from the play, and several characters not found in the book are introduced in the drama.

The book there is a paucity of clean-cut comedy. The stage demands a clean-cut comedy, and the result of the stage, Rose, in the instance, introduced a decided novelty. It might be classed as an eccentric comedy part. Sallie Laue plays it and she plays it in a manner that appeals about all the distinctive comedy any play needs.

The stage version of the story has its opening scene in front of the Rousillon house. The first act is in the main a vehicle for introducing the characters and showing how the love of the hero and heroine are inextricably interwoven in the Revolutionary period. The second act depicts the story from the point of view of the hero's perilous expedition to bring Captain Clark to the succor of Vincennes, and ends in a very exciting curtain. In the third act the British soldiers are about to assault Alice, whom he has decreed to be for her safety she enters his private chambers from the lookout which signals that Clark's forces are to attack, and then in a rapid combat with the colored fellows herself until the Revolutionaries arrive and capture the fort.

William Courtleigh does splendid work in the part of Lieutenant Beverly and proves he could do some of the opportunity afforded. Arthur Hoops as Colonel Hamilton, makes the most of his ungracious part, and Thomas McGrath is a quiet, natural Father Brev. Miss Margaret Gordon in the ingenue part, one of the introductions of the drama, is admirably as she looks pretty, and she is "as pretty as a picture." Wallace Eskane, Cecil De Mille, Robert Broderick and George E. Bryant and Helen Tracy are the names of the capable members of the company filling minor parts.

The stage settings are picturesque and the mechanical and electrical effects are more than usually elaborate. "The Stowaway" was the play presented at the Academy last night by the Irene Meyer company and in the afternoon "The Two Orphans" was seen. Both were acted in a splendid manner. The specialties were very entertaining.

"The White Rat" will be the attraction this afternoon. "Eben Holden." E. M. Holland will play "Eben Holden" in the dramatization of that popular story to the Lyceum Theatre. The play is a most interesting and readable feature in the production that Charles Frohman will make and it is said that this manager has been one of the few particular in every detail of the company includes many well known names and the rural scenes will give elaborate presentations.

The play was made from Irving Bacheller's highly successful book by Edward E. Ross, who has said in his preface that he has followed the spirit of the author and done full justice to the quaint characterization of "Eben Holden." A pretty love thread runs through the play. Seats now ready.

West's Minstrels. The William H. West Big Minstrel Jubilee will be the attraction at the Lyceum theatre Friday night next. To present high class minstrelsy has always been the aim of that most profitable and successful showman, the late William H. West. That he has succeeded to a notable extent was made manifest last season, when he toured the country with his minstrel organization ever presented in America.

The company selected for this year embraces the names of many famous vocalists and comedians. The singing contingent is particularly bright, and includes some of England's greatest minstrel troupes; Harry Sylvester, a newly discovered and now famous singer; Wilton N. Miller, a famous bass of England, and George Jones, a tenor of whom great success is predicted. The comedians are headed by Billy Van, the irrepressible comedian of last season's company, who will be heard from in an entirely new specialty and a host of other new gags and jokes that are sure to convince his friends. W. H. Hammond, John King and N. S. Carr comprise the other old men, and as they have always been considered among the funniest of black-face comedians, a good laugh is predicted for everybody. Seats go on sale this morning at 9 o'clock.

"Friend Karl." "Friend Karl" is the play which Emmet Devoy will appear at the Lyceum theatre Saturday night next. It is not only an admirable vehicle for the star, but it also develops a dramatic story of great interest. There are at least two scenes which will compare favorably in their dramatic interest with the famous melodramas. One is the scene at the end of the second act, which is so managed and arranged as to produce some really novel and startling stage effects.

Irwin's Big Show. Beginning with the usual matinee at the Star theatre Thursday, Fred Irwin's Big Show will be the attraction for three days. Mr. Irwin offers a grand show of the most modern and latest in the line of vaudeville and burlesque. "Are You an Eagle?" Members of this order will not fail to see this great opening burlesque. It is funny from start to finish.

Shiloh's Consumption Cure. Guaranteed to cure Consumption, Bronchitis, Croup, Whooping Cough, and all Lung Troubles. Cures Croup and Colds in a day. Sold by all Druggists. Wholesale and Retail, Dr. J. C. Roy, N. Y. For free trial bottle.

the labor of love performed by the Colonial Dames, in erecting such a magnificent tribute to the memory of the men who, in sleeping their last long sleep in the silent bivouac of the dead.

The total number of soldiers buried in the Spanish war section, exclusive of the victims will be marked by a white marble headstone, similar to that in the civil war section, as soon as an appropriation for that purpose is made by congress.
