THEY COMMEND THE TRIBUNE'S EDUCATIONAL CONTEST.

Say That It Stimulates a Desire for Advancement and the Opportunities Offered Should Find Plenty of Young People Eager to Grasp Them-While the Object Is a Business One, It Is Eminently Practical and Helpful-One Clergyman Who Has Had Experience with a Tribune Scholarship-A Detailed List of Rewards-Advantages of Enrolling Now.

The Tribune's third Educational Conest is rapidly nearing the date of its formal opening. Only a little more han three weeks are now left before the first day. On Monday morning, May 5, it is hoped that a number of zealous, ambitious young workers, of both sexes, will enter upon the congenial work of striving to win a foothold upon the ladder of success. Those who enter this contest will find he work not only dignified, but pleasant and easy, for, to paraphrase a well-known saying, all the world loves an ambitious young person who is eager to rise on his or her own merits, and the contestants will find hundreds only oo glad to lend a hand in helping them to achieve their worthy desire for better education and the success which that means. At the same time it will test the mettle of those who enter the race and assure the selection of only the worthlest for the honors that are to be

How Clergymen Regard It.

Stimulated by a desire to find out what the opinions of the leading clergymen of this city were in regard to the Educational Contest, a Tribune reporter yesterday interviewed a number of them, without respect to their denominational preferences. Of the clergymen seen there was not one but thought that The Tribune was doing a good thing for the community and that its successes in the past years in the contests had done much to elevate the literary aspirations of the young men and vomen, and even influence some who had not taken an active part as contestants by reason of the example set by those who had. A few of the statements made by the clergymen are ap-

Heartiest Commendation.

Rev. R. F. Y. Pierce, D. D., pastor of Penn Avenue Baptist church, spoke as concerning the Educational

"My attention has been frequently lirected to the Educational Contest as clanned by the Scranton Tribune, and f I understand the purposes of the conest and the methods employed, I dedre to give my heartiest commendation o the enterprise and my best wishes to he contestants.

"The contest proposed is not simply struggle for ambitious excellence in securing a larger number of subscribers or The Tribune than one's competitors, but it is a struggle for a prize honor-n education. "A most commendable feature of this enterprise, and one which gives it added strength in the minds of all sensible people, is that all who may secure their labors, a cash bonus on each subscription. Those who excel receive the greater reward, the scholarship in some well-known Musical, Commercial, Normal, or other educational institution.

"No more practical or praiseworthy method could be devised by the manigement of our daily papers to increase he popularity of their several journals and enlarge their subscription lists than the profit-sharing and honorbearing plan of the Educational Con-

"The plan is mutually helpful; it is an educational impulse to place a clean daily paper in the homes of the people (and our Scranton dailies are exceptionally free from scandals, retailed vice, and general "yellow journalism"). It affords any enterprising and energetic person an opportunity to win a hance to gain one of the highest earthly prizes—an education.

"I congratulate Mr. Byxbee, the business manager of the paper, for the excellence of the plan which he has devised: the fairness of the methods employed: the valuable prizes which he has offered, and the business acumen n promoting such an enterprise. I trust here will be many young people who will strive to secure these choice gifts."

Expensive, but Beneficial. Rev. Charles M. Giffin, pastor of the Elm Park church, said: "While I am not entirely familiar with the features of The Tribune's Eduational Contest, still I feel that it cannot but be beneficial to the community in inspiring its younger members with desire for higher education and furnishing them a means to gratify the ambition. While I cannot see how The Tribune can afford to enter into these contests from a business standpoint, owing to the expense involved, yet aside from that the project cannot fall to help the paper and the young people who take advantage of it. The idea has hearty approval and I trust that it will be entirely successful."

Enterprise Is Praiseworthy.

Rev. James McLeod, D. D., pastor of he First Presbyterian church,on Washngton avenue, when asked if, in his pinion, the Educational Contest conducted by The Tribune, were conducive of good results to the community,

"You may quote me as saying that I think the enterprise of The Tribune is praiseworthy. The fact that it can find young people to take up this work shows two things: First, that those who take part in the contests are desirous of obtaining a higher education; and, second, that they are willing to devote several months of their time in attaining that object, showing an ambition that is to be praised. While the object of The Tribune is first a business one, yet it takes a form that is eminently practical and helpful. It is a legitimate help to youth, and as such the young men and the maidens who take advantage of it have nothing to ose and everything to gain, as is shown by the results of your two previous contests, when a distinct benefit was conferred on some of the young people of this city. The idea has my warm approval."

Speaks from Experience Rev. Harris Lewis, the rabbi of the Benai Abraham and Jacob synagogue, on Penn avenue, near Mulberry street. was enthusiastic in his endorsement of The Tribune's Educational Contest. In

"I regard the Tribune's Educational Contest as being of great benefit to the young people. Last year my son, Meyer, won a scholarship through your Educational Contest in the East Stroudsburg State Normal school, and te is delighted with the school and its instructors. He was home last week to spend the Easter holidays, and so keen was his interest in the studies he s pursuing there that he was in haste for the week to get over so that he might go back. Everything that The Tribune promised him has been given, and now for a few months work he is assured of a thorough education. I can commend The Tribune's enterprise as one entirely worthy, and I would not hesitate to urge any one of the younger members of my congregation to take advantage of this year's offer, I will willingly testify to the beneficial nature of these contests to any one who is interested."

Simply Rewarding Industry. Rev. Luther Hess Waring, pastor of the Grace Lutheran Evangelical church, corner of Penn avenue and Mulberry

"The Tribune's Educational Contest s a most admirable scheme. Anything that elevates the literary standard of the community is to be commended, and this, from what I know of it, assuredly does elevate the minds and aspirations of the young people. The principal feature of The Tribune's contests that pleases me is that one wherein while you are placing educational advantages in the younger people's way it is in no sense an act of charity; but whatever advantages they derive from the contest, they have to work for. The indus try you stimulate is good for then physically as well as mentally, and you are giving the young people an opportunity to develop their energies and resources. It is, in my opinion, a highy commendable enterprise, and one which I wish to heartily endorse. I am pleased to know that The Tribune has nade a success of the former contests and it has my hearty good wishes for

Petersburg Should Be Represented. Rev. John Randolph, pastor of St. Peter's German Evangelical church, on

Ash street and Prescott avenue, said: "I am gratified at the fact that the young men and women of this city and surrounding towns are enabled to get a higher education in this way. The young people should avail themselves of this opportunity to equip themselves for the future. The excellent management of these contests in the past is a guarantee that this year's will be a success. It is a highly laudable enterprise, and as such, the teachers in our schools should co-operate with you to make it a satisfactory test of the ambitions of their pupils. I should think that some of the young people of the Petersburg section of Scranton might try to benefit themselves through your contest."

In No Sense a Charity. Rev. M. L. Firor, pastor of the Calvary Reformed church, Monroe avenue corner of Gibson street, said: "As far as I understand your Educational Contest, it is a good thing, and I believe that the young people who participate in it will benefit thereby I think the idea of striving for an education is a fine thing; much finer than working for a mere money consideration. The benefit that will undoubtedly come to those who are sent away to school through The Tribune can, of course, be obtained in no other way and were I a young man, ambitious of obtaining a higher education, and with no other way in my power to gratify that ambition, I should hail the opportunity to earn my way through an enterprise like this. It is in no sense a charitable enterprise, as all who win their way must earn their way. I regret the fact that there are so few young persons in my church who are of an age to take advantage of this opportunity, and I singerely wish that you will have the utmost success in your laudable undertaking. What the Scholarships Are.

As it is possible that there are some readers of The Tribune who do no know what is comprised in these offers, the complete list of scholarships, with their cash values, is printed this morning. A number of them provide tuition, board, furnished room, washing, and other incidentals, while some provide for tuition alone. Any one wishing full particulars regarding any scholarship in the list should write to The Tribune's "Contest Editor." following are the thirty-two scholarships:
