NEW BUSINESS BLOCK AND BANQUET HALL

W. W. Watt Arranging for the Construction of a Splendid Building, That Will Be a Creditable Addition to Carbondale — The Plans.

Halls are being sought for the splendid business block which W. W. Watt proposes to erect at the rear of his present commodious building on North Church street.

The new building will be three stories and besides containing abundant room for business purposes it will have a banquet hall that is proposed to measure one of the finest in this section. This will be the largest dining room. The floor space will be 60x72 feet. A great platform or stage 10x20 will be at the end of the hall. The seating capacity will be 500. The hall will accommodate the most ambitious public production and will likewise be adapted to private affairs, banquets and the like. All the materials and the appliances will be the best.

The present hall will be reconstructed and will be better adapted than ever to dancing parties. A new floor will take the place of the present one.

The second floor of the new building will probably be fitted for a club, with a gymnasium attached. The section of the old building now occupied by the First M. E. church congregation will be remodeled with offices. In the new hall on the top floor the walls of a large banquet hall, which has been sorely felt in Carbondale, will be supplied. The entrance to the second and third floors of the building will be from Church street as at present.

The business portion of the new building will be occupied, on the first floor by Reese Brothers, the Salem avenue merchants. This will give them one of the finest warerooms in the valley.

Mr. Watt's shows highly commendable enterprise in this venture and the construction of the proposed building will be a pleasing factor in the town's progress.

SUSQUEHANNA DOG WON.

Six Hundred Dollars Taken from Scranton Sports at Pittston.

The dog fight at Pittston which was mentioned in yesterday's Tribune attracted a crowd of Honesdale, Susquehanna, Carbondale and Scranton sports that crowded the "sweatbox" in Brownstown, where the two dogs chewed at each other.

The fight was not what the sports would call a warm one; it was only fair. The dog that was born in Hornellsville, N. Y., raised in Susquehanna and trained in Carbondale, was away too much for the scrappers from West Scranton. On the way to the scene of the fight, the bluster of the Scranton delegation almost frightened the Hornellsville-Susquehanna-Carbondale men, but when the dogs were led into the pit, there wasn't a cent of Scranton money around at any odds. Bets from this end of the line had to go a-begging.

When the dogs were set on each other, the Susquehanna-Carbondale bull had his own way and got first "scratch" on the Scranton quarter. Throughout, the latter got the worst of the chewing, while the fighter of several homes had only a slight scratch on his big-brained nose.

The purse was $400, and the gate money. — This the sports from here took away with them, together with all the money. The Scranton lads would dare risk on their fighter. Perhaps $700 was transferred to the pockets of the Susquehanna and Carbondale men, from this end of the line had to go a-begging.

The elated crowd returned to Carbondale on the 2 o'clock train yesterday morning, with their fighting victor. The dozen Susquehanna and Hornellsville men went home on the Erie yesterday forenoon.

while working on a finishing lathe, Scott was cut early in the day and was succeeded at the lathe by Stoddard. Soon afterwards, the latter met with the same kind of an injury.

Stoddard's hand was cut so badly, he had to have the opening dressed at Dr. Wheeler's hospital. Both will be thrown idle for a week or ten days.

TOWN TOPICS.

It's a rare attraction, "The Bonnie Brier Bush," which Manager Breese presents at the Grand on Monday night, and it is hoped that there will be an appreciation of a dramatic offering of such rarity as will not give the city a black eye, as it were, on its reputation as a good theatrical town.

Without exposing itself to the charge of extravagance, The Tribune can assure this will be the best thing in the drama this year and Carbondaleans will see in many a day. It can be safely said that no production ever thus far in Carbondale has commenced to approach the excellence of J. H. Stoddart and his "Bonnie Brier Bush."

William Winter, the New York Tribune dramatic critic, declares that "The Bonnie Brier Bush" "transcends anything ever seen on the American stage." Such an opinion as this is an assurance of the dramatic value of the play that is coming to Carbondale. Aside from this, it will be quite a rare privilege to enjoy the acting of J. H. Stoddart, who is the oldest actor on the American stage who is active throughout the season. Of course, it is Mr. Stoddart's acting which is the feature of the play, acting that in some of its shading and sidelights has not been seen on the American stage in many a day. In the light of all these happy and rare circumstances, a fitting reception should be given Mr. Stoddart on Monday night.

It was during the pelting rain of Tuesday afternoon. A middle-aged woman was going up Park Place. She had no umbrella and she had her skirts pulled up as far as was permissible. She was carrying along, and those who saw her from near the window were led to observe that nothing would stop her until she reached home. But to others it is human. Those observers forgot that there was a millinery store further along the street. When the hungry woman reached the millinery store she raised her head and saw the display of summer hats, flowers, etc., in the window. Instantly she halted, clutched a firmer hold on her skirts, drew closer to the window and there, in the dazzling rain, with unprotected form, she took a satisfied look at the bright things of the milliner's window on a passing woman.

There was a grateful response Wednesday to the welcome rain of Tuesday.

The swelling buds on the trees and bushes, invited by the genial sun, burst and unfolded their brightest smiles of green. The shy and backward blossoms, multiplied wonderfully, and altogether it was the first genuine day of spring in this section this year.

Memorial park, Carbondale's beauty spot, took on a brighter hue, and the path bed at the east end was just radiating with its crimson, white and yellow, pink beauty. A triangular garden of nature was at its best and gave its admirers a delightful foretaste of the offerings with which it will regale our residents this spring and summer. Under the care of Park Keeper Richard Udy, it can be depended upon to a standstill.

The happening which fortunately ended without disaster, caused somewhat of a stir along Church street.

WELL SITUATED.

He is one of those who can use "words of learned length and thundering sound" even if they are as mingled as those of Mrs. Marjoribanks and the Georgia cracker when Mr. Kimball so aptly describes. "There hasn't going to be any strike," he said to the man who had buttonholed him. "All the miners want is a few concussions. The companies will give them these concussions, I know they will. The miners just ask for recognition, and they will be recognized all right."

There might be more truth in fiction in the "concussions" he spoke about.

OLD TIME CARBONDALE.

Early Days Recalled by Paper Received by J. J. Joslin.

When the announcement was made a few days ago of the happy fact that our venerable townsmen, J. J. Joslin, had celebrated his 85th birthday anniversary, it was followed by numerous congratulations.

Accompanying one from abroad was a copy of The Carbondale Journal of 1850, sent by a resident of Wallville, who heard of Mr. Joslin's rare birthday happening in The Tribune. The old paper, which was published before Carbondale became a city, is highly appreciated by Mr. Joslin. It contains some quaint advertisements. Among those of general interest is a for sale "ad." inserted by David Hockley, offering for sale the Main street property now occupied by the Peoples and Graham's Shoe stores, and the Ivory in the rear. The price asked was $1,400. As interesting comparison it might be mentioned that today the yearly rental for the business block alone is about the figure that was asked for the land at that time, $1,400.

Another interesting advertisement is from the Delaware & Hudson company which tells of its proposed increase of capital stock by one and a half million dollars, in contemplation of extensive improvements and continued extensions. The advertisement also states a sort of inducement to prospective buyers, that the next semi-annual dividend will be declared for 8 per cent. These are a few of the interesting items of this half century old Carbondale paper, which Mr. Joslin has placed among his numerous treasured historic relics of Carbondale.

AN EXCITING EXPERIENCE.

Manager Carl Roessiger of the Krantz Brewing Company Hurt.

Carl Roessiger, manager of the Krantz brewery of the Pennsylvania Central Brewing company, in this city, had an exciting and dangerous experience with a frightened horse yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Roessiger was driving a buggy down South Church street, with his daughter beside him. The shafts became loosened, frightened the horse which made wild dashes down the street. Mr. Roessiger stirred himself and grasping a holder on the reins began to see-saw the animal, which was wildly aroused, and was tearing down the street. The horse see-sawed its course, coming so close to the curb, the alarmed passenger were fearful every moment of a collision and a spill of the occupants of the carriage. Mr. Roessiger's presence of mind and his determination backed by his physical strength relieved himself and his daughter of the peril that surrounded them, and in front of the Hoban property the animal was brought to a standstill.

The happening which fortunately ended without disaster, caused somewhat of a stir along Church street.

A NIGHT IN THE MINE.

Visit of Young People to the Wilson Creek.

There was a night of rare enjoyment spent in the Wilson Creek mine Wednesday night. Some of the underground visitors were from out of town and the sights they witnessed were a revelation. The occasion was one of merriment, reminiscent of a visit through a coal mine, the usual tricks being played upon the unsuspecting visitors. Before the party returned to the opening they were grouped for two flashlight pictures.

In the party were the Misses Mandie, Sarah Caldwell, Lillian Codding, Mamie Timmons, and Lillian Coon, of Birmingham; Edward Codding, Gilmer Morgan, Boyd Oliver, David Edwards, Newell Stoddard and Amos Washer.

THE LEADER'S BIRTHDAY.

The Carbondale Evening Leader last evening illuminated its editorial page with a waving American flag that announced that yesterday was its thirtieth birthday anniversary.

The Leader can rightly felicitate itself over the fact that it has been a useful factor in the growth and progress of Carbondale. The Tribune joins in the kind greetings and well wishes that will meet the announcement of its thirtieth birthday.

SCOTT CAME BACK.

The Man Who Sprinkled from Alderman's Office Settles Up.

The second and closing chapter of Edward Scott's lightning dash and escape from Alderman Morrison's office can be written now.

Scott came back yesterday and squared himself with his majesty, the law. He did not come personally to Alderman Morrison's office, but he sent a duly accredited agent who satisfied the claims against him. Scott, it will be recalled, shot out of Alderman Morrison's office a few days ago, while awaiting a hearing for obtaining goods from a merchant under alleged false representations. He slipped Constable Martin Carden in lightning-like order. Now, however, if he cares to pay a friendly call to the alderman's office he will be unmolested, as the settlement of yesterday brings him back to a greater extent the purpose of its creation. Many a visitor hesitates to enter the place through timidity, based on the belief that the park is private property. With the unusual favor removed this impression would go with it.

The familiar sight of the old blind man who keeps a daily station at the hall corner during the mild weather is another indication that the pleasant days are with us.

The lesson of patience that this sorely afflicted man teaches the passing world is one calculated to make one ashamed who is surrounded with the qualities of life that he is denied him. Every day, while the weather permits, he sits at this corner, keeping a lonely vigil, as it were, on the charity of the passerby, too many of whom are forgetful of his plight. He has no one to cheer his lonely moments, but he puts up with his lot with a resignation that is heroic. The drooping of a coin in his little tin cup surely does not call for much of a sacrifice, the part of those who travel this corner, while the sounds of the tingling coin as it rolls around the cup is sweet music to the blind man and his dependent little ones. At the same time it reminds the poor man that the solicitude of helpfulness towards others still lives.

Brakeman Douglas' Condition.

Brakeman William Douglas, who was injured in a Delaware and Hudson wreck at Avoca, a few weeks ago, had some of his toes amputated in Emergency hospital, where he has been since the accident. The disintegration of the tissue of the foot made this necessary. Douglas' condition, while not dangerous, is causing a good deal of concern.
