wo energetic and enterprising young His Vitality Still Exceedingly Low, Though He Has Improved.

Thomas Barrett, jr., the son of Select Councilman Thomas Barrett, who was in a dying condition after an operation for appendicitis, has rallied a little and last night he was what might be regarded as a trifle better. He is not out of danger, however, and there's no telling what course his trouble will take, The youth has displayed remarkable vitality, which gives some hope that he may survive.

Barrett's case, which is claiming universal interest because of the prominence of the family, is somewhat singular and the first one of its kind, with such symptoms, that has ever come under the notice of either Dr. Wheeler or Dr. Reed Burns, of Scranton, who is an expert operator in abdominal surgery. The trouble, it appears, was due to the long time that intervened from the day Barrett was stricken until he was taken to Dr. Wheeler's hospital and given over to the surgeons. He improved remarkably after the operation and it was believed he would get well, until Thursday night, when his vitality fell alarmingly. It was found that a gangreneous condition of the hyolved intestines had developed, which particularly afflicted the larger intestine. This was something that was not only unlooked for by the surgeon, but which was not thought of. Gangrene, under such circumstances us in this case, was never met with by either of the surgeons in all their experience, which has former Carbondalian and during his been notably extensive in abdominal residence here was conspicuous in diseases. The developments in Barrett's not interefere with the conduct of his case, it can be said, were somewhat of revelation.

The young man, who has been avorite among his associates, has their earnest wishes and prayers for his speedy recovery.

FENCES OF BLACK WALNUT. The Good Old Times When Fine

Wood Went Begging. From the Chicago "Little Curo A lumberman's convention is never in session very many hours before somewho was a member of Company B, body begins to criticize our pioneer Fifth infantry, United States Volun- forefathers for cutting up walnut trees into fence rails; for walnut wood is now home of his parents in Old Forge. The so scarce that it brings a higher price funeral was a military one and was at- in the market than mahogany, and its use is confined to the making of gun and relatives, and many Spanish-Ameri- stocks, knife handles, panels and ven- per-heated houses reverse these oldeers on cheaper woods. The old haircloth covered parlor suites of walnut, of the Nebo Congregational church, of- beloved by our grandmothers, find a ready sale, for the framework can be worked over into small articles But, alas, the pioneers needed cornfields, and the cornfields had to be fenced in from wild animals and tame stock. Then the hickory trees came down to build log houses and to make axe handles and wagon spokes; and what so good for the first benches, tabes, chests of drawers and bedsteads as red cherry? So blokery and red cherry tomorrow evening at Liewellyn's hall are scarce, too, now, and when building, for rehearsal. The chorus, an excellent decorating and furniture-making have become fine arts we must take woods the pioneer has left us and do he best we can with them. Heading the list of woods today in building is pine-hard, soft, white, yelow. A big pine tree is a joy to the circular saw. A log may be twelve year, fix the salaries of the several attended and enthusiastic rehearsal feet in diameter at the base and 150 to the cause of the American catarrh.

nails do not split it. The white pine of the North is such a delight to the and the spruce is often used as a substitute. The hemlock serves for rough into packing cases. Cypress masquerades as Georgia hard pine, and many a giant redwood tree must be astonished to find itself labeled "cherry," although, in spite of its beautiful color, it must know it is too soft to deceive any one who knows anything about wood. Red cedar has no imitators, for its odor cannt be duplicated. It is a very aristocratic wood indeed, intimately associated with literature and commercial accounts, for most of it goes into lead pencils. A cedar chest is always prized for the faithfulness with which it cares for furs and rugs and expensive garments of wool, for the odor of cedar is something the wool moth cannot abide. Hickory is still reserved for wagon spokes and hubs and axe handles and other articles requiring toughness, Beech makes heavy, strong timbers. Pines, however, are used for ship masts and telegraph poles, fence shingles. The cabinet and furniture woods that are native to this country are oak, maple, birch, elm, cherry, sawed (i. e., quartered and sawed across the grain) is probably the favpreparing to celebrate their anniver- orite for stair-building, interior finishing and solid furniture. It takes every color and finish, and is thus adapted to any scheme of decoration while it recommends Itself for its hardness and durability. Curly birch and bird-eye maple are also made into beautiful finishings and furniture. Birch is often stained to the color of mahogany, but the maple is a beautiful white wood with soft brown "eyes," which some people think as handsome as white mahogany. When your mother wants a new floor for the kitchen she demands a hard maple in narrow, matched boards. It will cost as much as a parlor carpet, but it will take scrubbings for a generation and come out white every time. Her kitchen table will probably be white ash, as will the cheaper bed from furniture and chairs. The rolling-pin in all probability will be maple, and the potato-masher, genuine cherry. I don't know why this is true, but many has not a scrap of cherry wood in it except the potato-masher; and sometimes that is beech wood. Ah, me! and our grandfathers used to make rail fences out of walnut trees and milk stools out of wild cherry! POINTS ABOUT CATARRH.

You Can Harden Youself Against It-Why Americans Are Catarrhal. It is a well-known fact that marked changes of temperature induce catarrhal affections, and it is also evident that the best prevention of a "cold" is a ready adaptation to the varying conditions of an uncertain climate. latter implies a certain resisting quality of the respiratory mucous memb ranes, which must be necessarily developed along rational lines. The hardening processes thus become questions of vitality, habit, and environment, An old Indian explained his immunity against low temperature by explaining that he was "all face." It was with him the habit of exposure to inclemencies and its reactive protecting tendency. The other extreme is seen in the coddling process which our modern methods of civilization encourage. When houses were made of willow the men were made of oak." Our sutime conditions.

The dry hot air of the modern dwelling is undoubtedly the most prolific of all the predisposing causes of catarrhal troubles. The mucous membranes are thus placed in the worst possible condition for resisting the impression of the outside atmosphere, Their natural protective secretions are not only decreased, but the blood supply of the air passages becomes relatively superabundant, congested, and sluggish, and the beginning of the end is evident enough. Persons who are luckily unaccustomed to these high temperatures often experience a sense of oppression from the same cause. It is the protest of healthy resistance against artificial enfeeblement. Foreigners say with truth that Americans literally bake themselves in their houses, and there is in this connection also much reason for their opinion as
