A NEW INTERPRETATION. Carlucci Company's Reading

Clause Causes Delay.

When the agreement prepared by the executive committee of the Stonecutters' union was presented to the officials of the Carlucci Stone company vesterday for their signatures, the union's representatives learned that the ompany placed a different interpretation on one of the clauses than they did. It was therefore decided to refer the agreement back to the union for consideration at a special meeting to be held on Friday night. Secretary J. F. Hammes said last night that a settle ment will probably be effected then, or in other words, that the men will accept the company's interpretation of the clause in question. He refused to state just what it is.

MEMOIR OF MRS. ELEANOR N. BAYLEY.

Written by Rev. George A. Cure.

Mrs. Eleanor N. Bayley was born in Pleasant Mount, Wayne county, Pa., January 17, 1828. Her parents were James and Phoebe McMullin, I lier parents were James and Phoebe McMullin, pioneers in Clinton township, her father clear-ing away the heavy native timber and building a home for his large family. Mrs. Bayley was the seventh of eight daughters, now all de-ceased; and only two of the three brothers sur-vive, James E, and Washington McMullin, both residing near the oid home. A few years after the completion of her twentieth year, Mrs. Bay-ley was married. Her bushand, Pecf.
