Judge Vosburg's Report and Opinion in Cassidy Estate.

Judge A. A. Vosburg yesterday handed down his report and opinion as auditing judge in the estate of Bridget Cassidy, deceased. The sum of $354.07, which the deceased received from her deceased husband's estate for her use during her lifetime, is now awarded to the children, Mary McGuigan and Wil-Ham Cassidy.

The bill of William Koch, jr., clerk; D. D. Jones & Son, the undertakers; Dr. S. H.Voorhees, for professional services, and a few other small claims are allowed, as preferred claims upon the fund for distribution. An allowance is also made to Attorney C. Comegys, for services as counsel for the administrator, and for the cost of the discharge.

Judge Vosburg also handed down an order fixing next Saturday, at 10 a. m., for the hearing of the proceedings in the estate of Ann O'Brien, deceased, to compel the representatives of the estate to file an account.

Chairman Baylor sought to explain the rules governing the matter at issue and to expostulate that he was only living up to the rules drafted by the Democratic party. "The Democratic party, hell!" came in tones of disgust. Ex-Representative Frank R. Coyne of Old Forge, had presented one set of credentials for himself and three others, alleging the borough was entitled to this number. Chairman Baylor protested that such was not the case. Patrick Mulherin, of Taylor, who sided with the John Coyne faction, thought to pour oil on the troubled waters by having the convention allow all four Old Forge delegates to vote. Although the John Coyne faction had the control of the convention cinched by a vote of two to one, he objected to granting special privileges to anyone and demanded
