The latest and greatest moving picture machine in the wonderful improved biograph which has no equal as an entertainer the most complete set first in America is with the Bostock-Ferrari Mighty Midway Carnival company. It presents pictures in full life size and with such startling distinctness that one is apt to forget that after all it is only the acme of the photographic art and to become deluded into the belief he is witnessing real and actual scenes. The latest pictures only are shown and include scenes and incidents of the recent visit of Prince Henry of Prussia to this country, the launch of the German Emperor's Yacht Meteor at Staten Island, N. J., latest scenes from the front in the Boer and Philippine wars, the departure of the British army transports for South Africa, cavalry charges and artillery in action, the famous Empire State Express going at the rate of 80 miles an hour, the launch of a British battle ship, and a myriad of other highly interesting subjects too numerous to mention. SCHOOL YEAR IS FORMALLY CLOSED

MISS JEANNETTE W. LAWRENCE, Valedictorian.

EDWIN ELMER LORD, Salutatorian.

Diplomas Presented to the 129 Young People Who Successfully Completed High School Course.

One hundred and twenty-nine young men and women were graduated last night from the Scranton High school in the presence of the largest throng of spectators in the history of the high school auditorium.

The heavy rainstorm which came up just as people were about to leave home for the High school, apparently didn't have the least effect in deterring them from going. Certainly it seemed as if forty-nine out of every fifty people who received tickets used them. Every one of the seats was full at 7:45 o'clock, and when 8 o'clock arrived the aisles were filled with people sitting in chairs and the back of the big auditorium was lined with rows of people standing.

The members of the class, headed by Dr. Joslin, the principal; President Gibbons, of the board of control; T. J. Jennings, chairman of the high and training committee, and a delegation of school controllers, filed in and took their places on five rows of seats ranged the length of the stage. They made a wondrously beautiful picture as they stood while Rev. Dr. R. F. Y. Pierce offered the opening prayer. The young women were all attired in gowns of purest white and the men were in evening dress.

After the singing of Gounod's "Praise Ye the Father," by the members of the class, under the leadership of Prof. C. B. Derman, Edwin Elmer Lord, the salutatorian, delivered a brief address of welcome to the parents and friends of the graduates and the members of the school board present.

COMMERCIAL INVASION. He followed this with an essay on "The Commercial Invasion of Europe."

MISS MILDRED EVELYN KITTLE. Honor Pupil in the Commercial Department.

In which he presented in a comprehensive manner some of the reasons why the products of American manufacture find such a market throughout nearly all of the countries of Europe, except France and Russia. Our immense trade combinations, popularly known as "trusts," he declared to be largely responsible for this fact because of the saving which organization brings about, enabling them to underbid the European manufacturers.

"Whittier's Love for Mankind" was the theme of a brilliant essay by Miss Ella Thomas, who presented with much grace of diction and fluency of style many of the lovable traits of this great American poet—his simple faith and trust in God and his warm-hearted sympathy for all his fellow-men.

Miss Evelyn Delcie Gates gave an interesting history of the fable in literature, paying special attention to Aesop's fables, those quaint stories of animal life which have been the inspiration of all fable writers ever since he lived and flourished in ancient Greece.

Miss Mildred Evelyn Kittle, who has a soprano voice of wide range, sang "Mona," and was followed by Horace Edward Chandler, who delivered an oration on "The Development of Wireless Telegraphy." He told in an interesting manner the story of wireless telegraphy from its beginnings and of the perfected inventions of Marconi, which have rendered possible the transmission of messages across the ocean without wires.

THE VALEDICTORY. Miss Jeannette Wilson Lawrence, the valedictorian, was greeted with loud and prolonged applause when she came to read her essay on "Alchemy, the Father of Chemistry." She told of the struggles of the wise men since civil-the spectacle there presented and urged all to go away with higher educational ideals foremost in their minds.

President Gibbons announced at this point that while he is no speech-maker he was determined to take some part in the exercises and so he assisted in the distribution of the diplomas. Each graduate came in for some applause and the favorites came in for extra ovations.

stone began, to find the philosopher's stone which would turn all metals into gold, and the elixir of life which would prolong vitality indefinitely. The researchers made by these will-o'-the-wisp chasers gradually led to a closer understanding and knowledge of the composition of material things. In a few well selected words she bade farewell to her classmates and teachers.

The formal address to the graduates was made by Dr. W. C. Joslin, the principal, who consumed less than five minutes in speaking, but who gave an address which was a little rhetorical gem. He said:

"It is not my voice, the voice you have obeyed almost daily for the last ten months that the class of '02 is waiting for; it is the voice of him who speaks as the representative of the educational guardians of the city who will pronounce the 'well done,' and follow with an appropriate and significant action and yet the present seniors have freely used their perogatives in chapter 'cuts' during the last week that I think I can in turn sell the few minutes left before you finally and forever escape from my jurisdiction and are transformed from modest seniors into omniscient graduates.

"Class of '02, my brave venturers on the ocean of life, doubtless there are in store for you many, many happy days
