BRADFORD COUNTY.

Special to the Scranton Tribune.
Towanda, July 13.—A woman with two young children, coming thousands of miles from home and unable to speak English, attracted considerable attention to travelers at Sayre upon her arrival a few days ago. When reaching the platform she began making around with anxious eyes to find her husband, but all was in vain, as he was not expecting his loved ones so soon. She sat up all night at the station and a part of the following day, anxiously awaiting. Several persons addressed her, only to receive a shake of the head in reply. She showed an envelope, bearing the inscription: "George Joseph, Sayre, Bradford county, Pa., U. S. A." but she could make no further explanation and wept wildly. Volunteers offered to assist her in finding her husband, and after a search and inquiry in the foreign residents, and also individuals brought before her for identification, all proved fruitless. At last her husband was found to be working near Athens. To say there was a joyful meeting and clattering of tongues need not be mentioned. The husband could speak English and after he had left his family in Assyria three years ago. He had sent them money to join him here and take up a home.

A tough-looking gang of gypsies passed through this section, southward, and proved to be a dangerous lot to do business in their line. Many were fleeced.

Jason Frost, a Lehigh Valley brakeman, while at Sayre, fell from his train, and although fifteen cars passed over him he only lost a portion of his foot. Mrs. William Tompkins, of Sheehy, is suffering from the effects of being struck by lightning. While out picking berries a storm came up and she sought shelter under a tree. A bolt shattered the tree and struck Mrs. Tompkins on the right side of the head. Part of her hair was burned off, red streaks made down the entire length of her body and her foot burned where

TAYLOR.

The Reds, the home team, defeated the Scranton Stars on the Riverdale grounds, on Saturday afternoon, in a one-sided contest. The visitors' inability to connect with Schields, the home twirler, was responsible for their defeat. The home team batted like fiends. Jones, the visitors' pitcher, was hit hard. The pitching of Schields and the fast double play for Engle were features of the game. The former struck out eight men and only allowed five hits. The score by innings: R.H.E. STAGE NOTES.
Robert Drouet, who was leading man with Mary Manning last season, is now spoken of for the same position with Mrs. Fiske next season. Mr. Drouet is hard at work on an original play which may be exploited next season.

"The Belle of New York" will again go out on the road next season, and Margaret Sayre will have Edna May's old role of the Salvation Army girl. Miss Sayre was Miss May's understudy when the piece was first produced in London. Reports from New York indicate that there will be more musical comedies on the road next season than ever before. Theater-goers have taken kindly to this sort of performance, and the managers, seeing the drift of sentiment, have been quick to take advantage of it.

After creating a role in "Bally in Our Alley," when it is first produced in New York, Marie Cahill will blossom out as a star, appearing in a piece built up along lines made familiar by May Irwin. George W. Lederer is backing Miss Cahill, and has promised a strong supporting company.
