Enjoyable Ping-Pong Social Conducted by Electric City Wheelmen at Their Club House-Notes of Many Kinds.

Last evening at the cosy club house mental, was also enjoyed. The instalof the Electric City Wheelmen, was held one of the most enjoyable pingpong socials of the season, which was enjoyed by the Wheelmen and their lady friends. Ping-pong cards and bowling were the principal forms of amusement. At 10.30 o'clock dancing began, the music being furnished by Miss Kate Reardon.

At a late hour cake and cream were served by the club caterer.

Judging from the bowling, the ladies of West Scranton will soon have numerous expert bowlers, and the gentlemen will have to look carefully after future laurels. The event was one of the most enjoyable in the club's history, and great satisfaction was expressed with the work of the commit-of an inexpressible sorrow cast itself over many hearts in the North End of the city yesterday afternoon, when the sad announcement was made of the death of Miss Maud Chivers, at twenty minutes to four, at Moses Taylor hospital, where, on Saturday last, she suffered a serious operation. Though on Sunday and Monday her recovery was confidently expected, she yesterday suffered a relapse which exhausted her strength till life ebbed itself into that sweet and peaceful sleep that knows no earth waking. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Chivers, of Lake Ariel, but for the past two years she has been a member of Mr and Mrs. Walter Christmas' family, In North Scranton, where she has been prized as an own daughter. To an exceptional degree her girlhood was endowed with the rich gifts of nature and the still richer graces of the Christian. She was a member of the Providence Presbyterian church-active and useful in Sunday school and Endeavor society work. Of her, it is truly to be said, she was loving and lovable. ### CUSTOMS OF CARD PLAYING. Rules That Should Be Sedulously

Studied and Observed.

From the Boston Transcript. In any game of cards there are cerain customs, or mannerisms, the careful observance of which adds greatly to the smoothness, dispatch and pleas-First. The best and easiest way to shuffle and mix the cards is to take the pack in two parts, and holding them loosely, ram one part into the other, and then, holding the pack in your bands, keep throwing the cards over and over each other from the bottom o the top. The work of dividing the pack in two parts and putting them down on the table, bending the cards almost double to make one part mix in with the other, takes more time, does not mix them as well, and needlessly wears out the cards. Second. According to all authorities draw from is a waste of time and trouble, it being impossible to draw therefrom without turning the corners of the cards in every direction, making it no little trouble for the dealer to gather them up. It is hard to understand how any one should get into such a habit of unnecessary and absurd waste of time and trouble.

Third. The dealer having passed the pack to you to cut before dealing, you should always place those cut nearest to him. Many don't seem to know, to judge from their actions, what to do with the cards cut off from the top of the pack, and not infrequently place them farther from (instead of nearer to) the dealer. This, it will be ob-served, makes it a little awkward for the dealer in gathering them up. Some players, again, won't lay down those taken off the pack till the dealer takes up the bottom cards. Again, too many will do what is more awkward-hold the entire pack in their hand for you to cut. By persons always observing the habit of cutting from them-i. e., placing those taken from top of pack nearer the dealer-he (dealer) may then be tooking off or talking to any one at the time, and not know (whether he saw you or not) which cards go on top of the pack. This apparently small matter of cutting occasions more awkwardness than little.

Fourth. It is essential to an intelligent game that each player may judge from the plays what each party holds in his hand, that everyone should play in turn. All cannot see who plays this and who plays that when cards are thrown down irregularly. Again, the adversary may judge from your play what he should play, and you don't give him this advantage if you wait till your turn, when your turn is after

Fifth. Spitting on the thumb in dealing cards is entirely unnecessary, as the cards are glazed and slip easier without. So this nasty habit that sticks up and spoils many a pack of cards may as well be dispensed with. Sixth. In playing always throw down the card and take your hand off. The habit many have of putting the card down with hand over the face, and then gathering up the trick (without taking hand off), makes it impossible for others to see what he plays. This one habit causes more questions than a little. Seventh. When your partner takes a trick don't be in so much of a hurry to have him pick it up as to shove the cards towards him. You frequently annoy by knocking the cards out of his hand as he is gathering them up. Eighth. Don't get in the way sammering the table with a pack of cards. It is unnecessary, and wears out the cards.

Ninth. According to all authorities in cutting before dealing, the trump card should be left turned up till the first trick is played. This obviates the necessity of people continually asking

'What are trumps?" There is always a right way as well' as a wrong way to do things; and freyou should "cut" for deal. The habit quently the right way is easier—as in pursued by many of sprawling the above case—than the other. Nothing pack over the table for the players to like a good habit.
