RETURNED CONVICT ATTEMPTS BURGLARY

Thomas Kane, Who Is Out of Penitentiary Only Two Weeks, Breaks Into Home of Martin Finlon and Is Caught in the Act-Pleads to Be Let Off, but Committed to Jail Without Bail by Alderman Jones.

After just coming out of the Eastern penitentiary, where he served a term of four years for burglary, Thomas Kane, of the West Side, finds himself face to face with another stay at Cherry Hill. Early yesterday morning, about 1 o'clock, he was caught breaking into the home of Martin Finlon, on the West Side, and was arrested two hours later by Chief of Police McAndrew and Patrolman William McAndrew, while asleep at his brother-in-law's home. He was arraigned later in the day before Alderman Jones and committed to the county fail without bail.

Prior to the hearing, Kane confessed his guilt to Mr. Finlon and begged him to drop the case. When arraigned a few minutes later, Kane plead not

Kane had been around town a fev hours before his attempt at burglary. He was in a Main street saloon about 11.30, and on leaving was observed by Patrolman McAndrew. The patrolman knowing Kane's record, and in the face of the numerous hold-ups in the city ecently, followed Kane's footsteps with suspicion until he was a considerable listance away from his beat. About 1 o'clock a small dog, scarcely large enough to frighten a mouse, aroused the Finlon family with his sharp, piercing bark. Mrs. Gilhool, a daughter of Mr. Finlon, who was visiting at her ather's home, was startled, on being aroused, to see a man endeavoring to elimb into the window of the dining room, which led off the room where she was sleeping. She made a pretense that some one in the house was armed and courageously kept up a shout for her father to shoot. Mr. Finlon, in the meantime, himself made his way downstairs, and, though unarmed and unaware of how many men might be on he outside and how they might be prepared to resist, he boldly struck out to acad off the intruder. Kane, in the neantime, ceased his operations and started in the direction of his fathern-law's home. Mr. Finlon, who had been joined by his son, shouted to the nurrying man to halt. Kane, fearful that the Finlons were armed and that he might be shot, stopped and, turning to the older Finlon, muttered something about being his friend. Finlon, after he and his son recognized Kane,

Mr. Finlon told Kane, however, that he would not retreat from whole community. Kane, when arraigned, plead not

Mr. Finlon's story was that Kane must have used a jack or some other instrument with which to pry off a slat of the shutters, which were securely fastened. After breaking the slat he and then raised the window high enough to fasten it with the catch. He was climbing up on the sill when Mr. Finlon's daughter shouted, causing him to retreat. During the recent hold-ups, more or less suspicion was attached to him. but nothing was learned that implicated him. His record is a bad one, and since it became known that he was home, West Side residents have been in fear of an attack from him. He appears to have a weakness for robbing places, whether or not his booty may be of any value to him. Once he robbed a shoemaker's shop, taking hammers and shoe nails, which were of no use

Another Attempt at House-Breaking. Another attempt at house-breaking was made at the home of Deputy City Treasurer Michael Connor, on Railroad street, a few nights ago. Patrolman Carden observed a man sneak through the side gate of the premises, but though he quickly followed, the man eluded him. Later, the watchman at the Clover Leaf Manufacturing company discovered a man trying to raise a window of the Connor home. This was evidently the same man, who had returned, and who was acting in the belief that Mr. Connor kept an inviting sum of money near him.

THOS. O'CONNELL DEAD.

He Was a Resident of Carbondale Half a Century-A Well-to-Do Retired Merchant.

Thomas O'Connell, a resident of Carondale a half a century, whose good fortune allowed him to retire from mercantile pursuits several years ago, lied at his home, South Church street and Seventh avenue, about 11 o'clock yesterday forenoon. Death followed a sickness which manifested Itself in an attack of stomach trouble about two years ago. Since then he failed gradually, though the end came yesterday sooner than was anticipated.

Mr. O'Connell was born in Little Neck, Long Island, February 26, 1840, and was therefore in his sixty-third year. He came to Carbondale when he was only 12 years of age, and commenced to learn the candy trade with the late Daniel Prendergast. He left Carbondale when 18 years old, in company with his brother, Andrew O'Connell, both being attracted to the gold fields. His ventures were profitable, and when he returned in 1866 he had sufficient capital to go into the restaurant business in the Raynor property, where Boylan & Brennan conduct a similar business today. This followed the big fire in the lower part of the town, which destroyed a large hotel, thus giving the O'Connell Bros. increased opportunities of success. They had an immense patronage and from the money acquired made some good purchases of real estate. Among these were the buildings extending from the around the corner as far as the Gillis building on Park Place. The frame business block on Salem avenue, recently purchased by Joseph A. Hoole. was included in the holdings, in which Mr. O'Connell had more than a half and was noted for his close application to business. His name is associated with the growth and progress of the the duty he owed his family and the town, for he lent his efforts freely to advance Carbondale's interests. He was not active in politics, though he gave his support, both by his personal endeavors and his money, to the municipal water plant project, having been a member of the "committee of one hundred." Mr. O'Connell's chief interest was in his family, in whom all his inunfastened the catch of the shutters terests seemed to center. #### HONESDALE PRESS SAYS GENEROUS THINGS

Editor Haines, of Independent, Pays Deserved Editorial Tribute to Carbondale's Delegation of Saturday. Other Base Ball Echoes.

The delegation of Carbondalians who vent to the Maple City and enlivened that respectable village on Saturday, as it was never enlivened before, will blush to a man with modesty as this generous contribution from the pen of our esteemed co-laborer, Editor B. F. Haines, of the Wayne Independent, is read. In discussing the game of Saturday, he chose to express himself in an editorial in yesterday's issue, as follows. Ye 424 braves who were with us, if ye have ears, listen: Our brother guill-drivers over the mour tain are still caviling and quipping over base ball matters of the past and the present and the merits and demerits of players, clubs and umpire decisions, but putting all nonsense and prejudice and lying aside. Manager Tappan, of the Car-bondale "Pets" and his club are gentlemen and the crowd of visitors from our neighboring city who accompanied them, bent on noise, fun and frolic, were to no great extent unbecoming in base ball manners or conduct at the game or during their sofourn here last Saturday, Paror proprieties and upper ten social amen-ties are not expected of a throng witnessing the national game. The assem-blages that gather to see these games take in any class from the street arab to the preacher and occasional breaches of propriety and the peace among the spectators are apt to be unavoidable and expected incidents. Not anything, however, of a rowdy nature worthy of notice occurred on Saturday.

In justice to our neighbors over the nountain the Independent wishes to say that they gave our lovers of base ball one of the most interesting events of the kind they ever had the pleasure of attending and witnessing. Honesdale is ready for another fun-stirring time just

Our town and its newspaper men were unprepared for the unexpected number of visitors and did not give them the hospitable reception and consideration justly due them. We are in a measure amenable to criticism for an oversight in this respect, * * *

Other Honesdale Comments.

The Independent publishes a couple of columns of smart comment on the game, creating opportunities here and here to extraordinarily stretch the truth in order to have some amusement at our expense. But who would deny these simple rustic folk such harmless amusement. A goodly portion of The Tribune's account is reprinted in the Independent, including the clever poem written by Colonel John McComb, which made one of the greatest of the after hits of the game.

rich's favorite paper to confirm what we said about "Billy" Miller not being the Independent:

William Miller, who played the star game of the day, learned to play ball n Honesdale. He was coachman for Dr. O'Connell for several years. He came to Honesdale on Friday night to arrange for a boot black stand at the Allen house barber shop and proposes to do business there. He is not an ex-Cuban Giant. The Giants tried to sign him this year, but he refused to go.

Hurrah for the Striplings! The Independent's tribute to the hardy Striplings reads: The noise makers who accompanied the Carbondale visitors to Honesdale last Saturday are organized and trained rooters under the name of Amalgamated As ociation of Curbstone Striplings, No. 400. They added eclat, amusement and excitement to the game. Without them the play would have been quiet and tame and devoid of blare, clamor and clatter, elements that never full to arouse the en thusiasm of the populace. Hats off, Striplings.
