FIFTH DAY AT CAMP MEADE

were the guests of Major Frank Robling tonight. Lieutenant Colonel F. W. Stillwell, of the Thirteenth, was division officer of the day, and Captain John W. Kambeck, of Company B, was in charge of the provost guard patrolling the town.

Among the officials who are here are: Attorney General Elkin, Auditor General Hardenbergh, State Treasurer Harris, Secretary of the Commonwealth Griesel, Congressman Graham and State Senator Charles Warren.

The regiment had its full share of work yesterday, when the regimental inspection kept the men out in the glaring rays of the sun from 8.30 o'clock in the morning until 1.30 o'clock in the afternoon. Today, Colonel Waitres decided to hold the inspection in the shade, and a little later, and the only work which the boys had to undergo was a brigade drill, which was conducted this afternoon by General J. P. S. Gobin.

Tomorrow afternoon is set apart as Governor's day, and it is expected that camp will be crowded with visitors, as the official review of the troops here, always proved, in the past, to be the most popular manoeuvre of the week. It undoubtedly will be an imposing spectacle. The fifteen regiments, comprising the First, Second and Third brigades, the three batteries of artillery, two companies of cavalry, the United States hospital corps, now located in camp, will all pass in review before the chief executive officers of this commonwealth.

The review will be held on the division parade ground, where the brigade inspections have been held. It will be the occasion of a visit by Secretary of War Ellihu Root, and a review may also be held in his honor.

Colonel Waitres was highly satisfied with the regiment's showing yesterday and believes that, upon the whole, a better effort was made than in the average earned than in last year's inspection. The Thirteenth was put through some very difficult manoeuvres, but executed them almost without a flaw. It was in the line-of-battle manoeuvres that the men showed up particularly well.

The second battalion was formed for attack, under Major Frank Robling, with Major Whitney and his Third battalion remaining behind in support. Major Field held his command, the First battalion, as a reserve force. Colonel Waitres advanced ahead with the firing line.

The men entered into the spirit of the mock charge with the utmost vim, and it was largely their earnestness and eagerness which carried them through the hard day's drills in such splendid shape. Not a single man fell out of the line, and when the day was extremely warm and the drill long and severe, a few enforced absences of this sort would only naturally be expected.

The members of the Ninth regiment are feeling elated over the fact that their present colonel will be with them for the next five years. C. How Dougherty was re-elected to the command Monday night. He is the senior colonel of the Third brigade.

CAMP NOTES.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Meyers, of Scranton, were guests in camp today. The regulation field service helmet is regularly worn by Adjutant David J. Davis, of the Second battalion, and when capped by this headpiece, he bears such a resemblance to the pictures of mounted British officers, that he is regularly hailed as General Buller, by his friends and intimates.

Sergeant Courtwright, of Company K, was brigade sergeant of the guard today. The regimental band is rapidly acquiring a reputation as the regimental scape-goats, and are earning the title of the "Happy Hoopsters" of the Thirteenth. Last night the lie of Colonel Waitres was aroused by a sudden commotion in the rear of his tent. Investigation revealed the fact that Basil Drummer, Michael Tighe was innocently practicing on a clarinet, while his comrades applauded and passed favorable comment.

The colonel, however, wanted to sleep. Musical genius was for once frowned upon, and the unfortunate Tighe spent today in the guard house, where sorrowing fellow handmen visited him and deluged the drummer with gifts of tobacco and other things.

Company K boys felt pretty proud after inspection this morning. Colonel Waitres remarked that sergeant Edward Wellner was the best looking first sergeant in the regiment, and both the inspector and Major Duval, of the regulars, passed to compliment Private Charles Hamilton upon his fine military presence and bearing.

"The appetite of Kellerman" is a favorite topic among the members of company C. The popular sergeant is said to be possessed of an appetite which is wonderful to say the least, and members of company P are trembling lest their goat should yet fall a victim to the ever-hungry Kellerman.

Colonel J. W. Oakford, of Scranton, a member of Governor Stone's staff, was a welcome visitor at the quarters of Captain F. M. Vandling, Monday night. The officers of the Thirteenth are eagerly anticipating a repetition of Major Frank Robling's famous "pink tea" of last year. The reason for the social being called a pink tea still remains a mystery, and those who attended last year's convivial little gathering merely sigh deeply when they talk about it, and remark that whatever the drink was, it "surely was the real thing." No one, however, denies that its hue was pink.
