It now leaks out that coal in considerable quantities is being cut and caded at many collieries. The work is to remain at home on their promise to being done by under-bosses, company enter bail before Squire Holmes, at hands and returned strikers. To avoid drawing the fire of the strikers, and thereby making the workmen, less liable to be held up by strikers' pickets, the companies are covering their operations by not hoisting the coal to the surface. It is simply loaded and run to the foot, ready to be taken up when the companies see fit to do so.

Superintendent Rose, of the Delaware and Hudson company, when told by a Tribune reporter yesterday that it was learned, on reliable authority, the companies were doing some mining, said: 'Yes, coal is being cut and loaded every day in a dozen different places by our doing the same thing." When asked where this work was being done, Mr. Rose smiled and said: "I'll tell you

The Cayuga colliery of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western company is one place where it is known to almost a certainty that considerable coal is being cut. This colliery has also hoist-

The first stir among the striking miners in Carbondale in many weeks was made yesterday morning, when acting on instructions given out at meetings held on Sunday, in which National Organizer Collins was the leading spirit, pickets stationed along the highway turned back men from the Racket Brook washery and from the big Coalbrook breaker. The miners, however, were out in force and were stationed along the approaches to the immense breaker as early as 6 o'clock. The handful of men who approached the breaker have been at work about the mine for several days. The miners themselves were pretty certain that there would not be enough men on hand to resume, but their officers decided to take no chances and the miners were ordered to come out. The few employes or supposed employes, who were met with, would be a mighty small factor in the operating of a breaker like the

An Open Letter to the Board of Trade. Gentlemen: It is now about three months since the so-called "anthracite strike" of the mines of these valleys was inaugurated. This strike was decided ipon as a last resort, after the miners had exhausted every honorable means, without success, in their endeavor to se-cure, at the hands of the "coal operators," a redress of "grievances." Before calling for a cessation of labor, they made their last appeal to importial arbitration. To each and all appeals, the "coal operators" reply has been "unconditional surrender." Gentlemen, the board of trade of the city of Scranton we all know to be com-Though the force of pickets at the posed of wise, experienced, impartial, Racket Brook apparently over-awed Christian men. It would seem to me, your ansomething it can do? I believe there is.

It is true, the "operators" have sent out word that no outside influence will be tolerated. They will settle it their own way. Well, that need scare no one. I be lieve the greatest empire the world has ever seen during the last two years, sevand much missionary work to do at the eral times said something similar to that, deal of it, and found it to its advantage to do so. Such a petition can be completed in ten days and must needs be listened to.

HEARING IN THE WASHERY CASE | s

JUDGE NEWCOMB IS TAKING THE TESTIMONY.

Archbald Borough Authorities Contend That the Elk Hill Coal and Iron Company Is Guilty of Committing a Nuisance-The Company Defends on the Ground That It Has a Legal Right and Inferential Permission to Do What Is Complained of-Other Court Matters.

Judge E. C. Newcomb yesterday began the hearing on the rule for an injunction, secured by the Borough of Archbald to restrain the Elk Hill Coal and Iron company from running the water from its Archbald washery into what the borough claims is a city gutter.

Borough Attorney Richard J. Bourke, John J. Murphy and ex-Judge J. W. Carpenter appeared for the plaintiff. J. E. Burr and O'Brien & Martin represented the defense. W. A. May, general manager of the company, and William Murphy, superintendent of the washery, sat at the defendant's table. Burgess P. J. Burke, John J. McHale, president of the council, and a number of other borough officials were present and gave testimony in support of the injunction petition.

The company draws water from the Lackawanna river through three sixinch pipes, and after using it at the washery empties it into a sluiceway which extends down Bohemian street a distance of 115 feet. Then the water tured, his left lung penetrated and left arm broken. The body is now at Barcrosses Main street, through a box culvert and finds the river again.

The plaintiffs claim that the company has no right to empty water into the gutter and that by reason of its doing so causes a nuisance, as the flow is too great for the gutter and washes away the street.

NATURAL STREAM.

The company alleges that a natural stream has its source on the washery property and that the gutter in question is nothing more or less than an extension of this natural water-course. The company claims the right to empty water into the natural stream.

Just before the strike, an ordinance was before council granting the company the right to allow its washery water to course through the borough gutters. The closing down of the washery halted the passage of the ordinance. When the company reopened the washery last Tuesday the council passed a resolution forbidding the company the use of the gutter. The company paid no heed to the mandate of the council, hence the injunction proceedings.

The testimony yesterday was mainly descriptive of the conditions as described above. Today the company will put in its defense. Among other things it will show that the borough officials requested the company to build the sluiceway which carries the water for a part of the length of Bohemian street and that it was informally, at least, approved by the borough, when it was ompleted.

The company, through Attorney Burr, argued yesterday that it is entitled to use the water course under the decision in the celebrated case of the Pennsylvania Coal company against Sanderson. Judge Newcomb gave it as his opinion that the cases were in no way similar, but invited the defendant's counsel to proceed with what argue counsel to proceed with what arguments they might have to support their contention. Mr. Burr will be heard on the matter today. In the Sanderson case the plaintiff was upheld in pumping water from its mine and allowing it to take to a natural water course, despite the fact that it killed fish in the defendant's pond, erected on the stream some distance below the colliery. In this case, the judge pointed out, the company pollutes the water by washing culm with it before it deposits it where it where
