week. The conference opened yesterday, and on Sunday, Rev. F. B. feyer, pastor of Christ church, London, will preach in the large auditorium. Mr. Meyer is the successor of Dr. Newman Hall in his London pastorate and as a preacher is very popular with the masses. His writings are largely read. For many years he has been identified with the Northfield work, and was a warm friend of D. L. Moody. On Monday 'and Tuesday, Rev. John Kelman, of Edinburgh will deliver the main address. Mr. Kelman is well know for work among the students of the British universities. During the past year he made a trip to the Holy Land, at which time some very important archaeological discoveries were made. Dr. H. G. Underwood, of the Presbyterian board of missions will also be in Northfield during the early part of the conference. The memorable address given by Dr. Underhill at the recent Presbyterian assembly is still largely commented upon by the religious press. The managers of the conference plan to have either Mr. Meyer or Rev. G. Campbell Morgan at Northfield every Sunday of the conference. The conference closes on August 17. and will be immediately folowed by a series of post-conference addresses.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL LESSON FOR AUGUST 3 THE TABERNACLE. Exod., x1:1-13.

BY REV. J. E. GILBERT, D. D. American Society of Religiou Education.

CONTEXT-Before beginning the study of our lesson one should read with more than ordinary care the last fifteen chapters of Exodus. The context is always important in every passage of Scripture or other literature, but here it is indispensable. The few verses before us taken out of their setting can have little mean-ing to any mind and might as well be cast aside unless the direction made is followed. But in their rightful relation as part of a continuous narrative they may be instructive. It will appear upon this reading as suggested that our gen-eral topic is too comprehensive. We have not really a lesson upon the tabernacle but rather upon its erection and consecration. But for the sake of fuller and clearer view we shall treat the subject more extensively than these thirteen verses might require. The importance of the theme is sufficient warrant for such course.

HISTORY .- After the delivery of the first group of laws to Israel and the popular ratification of the covenant Moses was called again into the mount to meet God. There he was instructed to make a sanctuary, a dwelling place for the Al-mighty (Ex. xxv:8). For this purpose the people were directed to present a free-will offering of gold, silver, brass, fine cellent religious symbol. The same of was applied to Aaron and his sons afte linen, goat's hair, ram's skins, badger's skins, shittim wood,oil spices and pre-clous stones. Some of these materials they were washed in the laver. They were the clad in their priestly garments made after the directions of the Al were brought from Egypt, and some were obtained in the wilderness since the exmighty. All this ceremony set the place and persons apart as holy or sacred, re edus. The work was interrupted by the worship of the golden calf, but after the punishment of the offenders and the restoration of the people to the Divine favor, it was resumed and pushed forward to completion. It is impossible for us to determine precisely how much time was occupied in the construction.

DESCRIPTION.-The tabernacle proper was an oblong rectangular structure, 30 cubits (20 inches to a cubit) long by 19 cubits in breadth. It was built of shittem wood boards 10 cubits long standing erect in close contact with each other and fastened together. It was covered with four sets of curtain—one of fine twined linen ornamented with cherubim of cunning work, one of goat's hair, one of ram's skin and one of badger's skin. ram's skin and one of badger's skin.
