IS OUT OF DEBT.
Mortgages on the Home for the Friendless Were Cancelled Yesterday.

The Home for the Friendless is out of debt! This statement should cause universal rejoicing in Scranton, for the incubus of that everlasting debt has rung in the ears of the public like a knell and hung over the heads of the managers like a pall for several years. The last mortgages of $17,000 were cancelled yesterday, with no sound of the tocsin and no jubilation, but none the less, the intense relief which is experienced by those most interested cannot be reckoned by thousands who have loved and aided and supported this noble institution through the past.

The fact that the debt is raised will not lessen public responsibility, as regards the support of the home. The family numbers 84, the largest since the institution was established, and as the cost of living has greatly increased, the actual running expenses are necessarily heavy.

The advantage of having to pay no interest on mortgages will, however, be much appreciated. The board of control has caused the role of Providence in this case, having after some delay, purchased the old home plot on Adams avenue for $20,000. The final payment of $19,000 was made yesterday, enabling the president of the home, Mrs. W. D. Kennedy, to cancel the mortgages against both properties.

It will be remembered that when the new building was erected on the lots given by the late John B. Smith, it was expected that the old plot would be sold immediately. Negotiations then under way fell through and, to the dismay of the board, the property has remained on hand five years.

Mortgages to the amount of $23,000 were placed on the two properties, and it has been a long and hard struggle to reduce the amount to the sum of $17,000, which was yesterday paid. Through the generosity of public-spirited citizens and friends, $16,000 had been previously raised.

A few weeks ago the school board decided to buy the old home on Adams avenue, where the Manual Training school, the magnificent gift of Mrs. W. F. Smith, will be established. It was thought then that the entire amount would not be paid for some time, but the sale of bonds has made it possible to transfer the full sum of $20,000, and as a result the beautiful Home for the Friendless, which cost $65,000, now stands free from debt.

All the sum the four barrel is empty up there, and it takes a lot of bread to keep a family of eighty-four from going hungry.

NOW MAKES A NOVEL CLAIM
NEW POINT RAISED IN INUNCTION CASE.

Scranton Gas and Water Company Alleges That Its Main and the City's Sewer Are Both Located on Private Property—Surety Company Seeks to Escape Liability in the Case of a Defaulting Tax Collector. Another Non-Union Man Released from Jail on an Appeal.

The injunction proceedings instituted by the Scranton Gas and Water company against the city of Scranton, to prevent the latter from interfering with the company's water main, where it lies in the way of the new South Side sewer, on Front street, near Stone avenue, have taken a rather interesting turn.

When the case was before Judge Kelly Monday, the question at issue was whether or not the city could compel the company to remove the main at its own expense. The company was not ready to proceed with an argument of the question and adjournment was made until yesterday morning.

At the resumption of the hearing yesterday, the company made the contention that an examination of the premises, through its engineers, showed that both the sewer and the water main were on private property and not on a public street, in consequence of which, it was claimed by the company, the city could not claim right of way for its sewer over the company's water main.

The representation was made by the company that the lots abutting on Front street were laid out by the Lackawanna Iron and Coal company; that the latter company reserved the right to change street lines on its property any time it saw fit, and that recently the company, by extending the length of its plotted lots from 158 to 160 feet, extended the fence line on Front street, so that it included the portion of the street on which the sewer and water main are located.

Reserving the question as to whether or not this change of street line was made subsequent to the adoption of the course for the sewer, Judge Kelly adjourned the hearing until Friday morning, to give the engineers of the company and the city, and a disinterested engineer, George E. Stevenson, opportunity to investigate and make report on the present location of the street lines.

Ex-Judge E. N. Willard and I. H. Burns represented the company. City Solicitor George M. Watson represented the city.

According to the estimate of Director of Public Works Roche, the cost of moving the water main, to make way for the sewer, would be $40. The lawyers engaged in the case do not usually appear in court for less than that much per day each, and next Friday will make the fourth day for them to appear.

The case is to establish a precedent, and on this account is being vigorously contested. The city contends that the company must move its water mains at its own expense, any time a sewer or like municipal improvement, is blocked by it. The company, without admitting that the sewer has the right of way, stands out against being compelled to pay the expense of clearing the way for the sewer.

Poor Directors in Court.
The poor directors of Jenkins township, Pittston borough and Pittston township allege, in a declaration filed some time ago, that John D. Jones and the Fidelity and Deposit company, of Maryland, are liable to the poor district for several thousands of dollars, said to have been embezzled by Jones, who was a tax collector in Taylor borough in 1900.

The Fidelity and Deposit company was on Jones' bond for $40,000, and the poor directors claim they come in under this bond and accordingly on June 2 the poor district entered judgment against Jones and the Fidelity and Deposit company, of Maryland, on this bond for $40,000.

Yesterday the company petitioned the court to have this judgment opened and allowed to defend, setting forth a denial of liability and alleging that the judgment was unauthorized and unwarranted.

Judge Newcomb allowed the defendant company a rule to show cause why the judgment should not be opened, as asked for, and made it returnable to argument court in October. Attorney C. E. Bohan, of Wilkes-Barre, appears for the poor directors, and Attorney Robert J. Murray for the Fidelity and Deposit company, of Maryland.

Another Appeal Taken.
William Smith, a watchman at the Clark tunnel, was arrested Tuesday for disorderly conduct, on a warrant sworn out by a striker, Mark Kennahan, and in default of a fine of $5 and costs, amounting to $6.50, Alderman Sultry, of the Third ward, committed him to jail. Yesterday, Attorney H. S. Alworth secured his release by taking an appeal and filing a bond in the sum of $200.

Smith alleges that he was not guilty of disorderly conduct, and that his arrest was brought about with the sole purpose of preventing him from working.

FUNERAL OF JAMES BURNETT.
Remains Were Laid at Rest Yesterday in Cathedral Cemetery.

The remains of the late James R. Burnett, the well-known newspaper man also buried, were laid to rest in the Cathedral cemetery yesterday morning, in the presence of many of the friends, who had not only learned to respect his ability, but to love the man himself.

The funeral was held from the home, 1105 Richmond avenue, at 9.30 o'clock. At St. Paul's church, Green Ridge, a solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. J. A. Moffit, of Taylor, a cousin of Mr. Burnett. The other officiators of the mass were Rev. Bernard Byrne, of St. Peter's cathedral, deacon; Rev. M. E. Loftus, of St. Paul's, sub-deacon, and Rev. J. V. Moylan, of North Scranton, master of ceremonies.

"Ave Marie" was sung at the offertory by Miss Margaret Taggart, of Philadelphia, and her fine soprano voice was also heard in "Jerusalem, My Happy Home," "Nearer, My God, to Thee," was sung by Miss Mary Niland. In the absence of Rev. P. J. McManus, the pastor of St. Paul's, Rev. J. A. Moffit preached the sermon.

He took his text from Job, and said, in part:

It is not my intention to disturb the silent sorrow and grief of the sisters of the deceased. My words cannot soothe their grief. The only solace to their sorrow can be found in fervent holy prayer. Only through the grace of God can their wounded hearts be relieved from the weight of suffering. "Come unto me all ye that are weary laden, are the words of the Lord, and if I find words God cannot give consolation, surely the words of man are weak and vain. In addressing those words to his sorrowing relatives I know I am not speaking to deaf ears. I know I am speaking to those whose faith is well founded; whose faith is stronger than death. No human words can take away from their hearts the pain of those who have lost a brother whom they loved so well. Throughout all his sickness, throughout all his life their love for their only brother has always been shown in many ways.

The long nightly vigils in the sick bed chamber, the constant watching and care of the devoted sisters all testified to their love for their brother. But they are well grounded in faith, well instructed in God's doctrine, and this will give them an unending strength to bear their heavy affliction.

If there is any place outside the church where the faith of man is strengthened in the face of death, it is in the presence of those suffering in his last and fatal illness he gave evidence of his faith and trust in the goodness and mercy of God.

There he showed himself not in faith, strong in hope, sustained and comforted by the sacraments of his faith, with child-like trust he called upon God to strengthen him for the journey he was to make alone. The prayers of the sisters of the deceased, their frequent communions and religious exercises will be a perpetual memorial at God's altar to the memory of the deceased brother. This is the spirit of Holy Church, the spirit of true faith. Then let us all join with the bereaved relatives to pray fervently for his soul.

Numerous floral tributes testified in a measure to the general esteem and respect in which the deceased was held. A floral pen and pencil and furled scroll were sent by his fellow workers on the Truth. After the benediction, the remains were removed to the Cathedral cemetery and there entered.

The pall-bearers were: P. A. Barrett, James O'Connor, T. J. Murphy, T. J. Duggan, P. J. Messett and John H. Jordan. The flower-bearers were M. A. McGloidy, and W. J. Paart, of the Public Ledger, Philadelphia.

A delegation of the Lackawanna bar and a large number of newspapermen were among those in attendance at the funeral.

PASSED WORTHLESS CHECKS.
"Dr. Ward" Buncoed Furrier Out of Automobile Cloak.

The police have been notified that a man giving his name as Dr. J. E. Ward, claiming to come from Syracuse, had passed a bogus check on a central city furrier, from whom he purchased a $14 automobile cloak.

Last week Ward came to this city and tried to secure a room in the Paul building. He offered a check for $35 in payment, to R. P. Hamilton with whom he was negotiating for the room. The check was signed by W. E. Whitney, of Corning, N. Y.

Communication with the latter place revealed the fact that the check was a forgery, and the room was refused.

Ward then visited the furrier's place and purchased the cloak. The merchant had his own suspicions about the check, and when he changed for Ward gave him a check for $21, dated ahead four days, in order that he could stop payment, if the check was discovered worthless. Ward has not been apprehended.

THIS OUGHT TO SETTLE IT.
M. L. Smith Proves an Alibi for Admiral Dewey.

District Passenger Agent M. L. Smith is one Scrantonian who was not fooled by the mythical Dewey visit; for at the time that Chaplain Rose was finding out that Charles H. Long was not the hero of Manila bay, Mr. Smith was having an enjoyable conversation with the admiral at Mt. Pocono.

The admiral expressed unbounded delight with the Pocono region, saying he had never visited any portion of country that charmed him more effectively; and he expressed surprise that the attractions of this great mountain resort were not more extensively made known to persons of leisure at a distance.

The bracing mountain air seems to agree with both Admiral and Mrs. Dewey. Both are enthusiastic in praise of it.

The case was reported to the police, and the boy was placed under arrest, and the watch was recovered where he had sold it. Cramer was immediately discharged from the messenger service. He will be given a hearing this morning.
