LAKE WINOLA.

Special to the Scranton Tribune Lake Winola, Aug. 11 .- The most enloyable event of the season was the shirtwaist hop at Hotel Clifton, last Saturday evening. Oppenheim's or-chestra, under the direction of Fred Kroll, assisted by I. Paul Menkin, of Foster. Scranton, furnished the music. Hotel Clifton bids fair to be the most popular in the northeastern part of Penn-

WORN TO A SHADOW.

When there is a falling off in flesh in woman or man there is "something wrong." And that something wrong is generally a loss of nutrition due to disease of the stomach and the other organs of digestion and nutrition. Some-times this loss of flesh is accom-panied by variable appetite, but in many cases the appetite does not fail and there may be a constant desire to eat. Languor, nervousness, irri-tability, sleeplessness, are symptoms often associated with this loss of nutrition and fal-ling off in flesh.

Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures disease of the stom-ach and other or-gans of digestion and nutrition. It enables the perfect digestion and assimilation of food so that lost flesh is regained and the physical health re-established.

"I had suffered from indigestion and only those who have suffered from it know what it really is," writes Mrs. M. J. Fagan, of 1613 East Genesee St., Syracuse, N. V. "I had had severe ettacks of headache and dizamess, with cold hands and feet; everything I ate distressed me, bowels were constituted and I was growing tery thin and nervous. I cannot half express the bad feelings I had when I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I took nine bottles of the 'Discovery' and have taken several bottles of Dr. Pierce's Pieasant Pellets. I commenced feeling better with the first bottle and kept on improving. Now I am so greatly improved in health my friends often speak of it. I most heartily recommend these medicines to all suffering as I was."

TAYLOR.

The funeral services over the re mains of the late John Strine, of Storrs street, took place from the family residence yesterday afternoon and was largely attended. The funeral services were held at the German Lutheran church. In the absence of the pas tor, the Rev. William Luer, of Archbald Lutheran church, and Rev. H. H. Harris, of the Calvary church, officiated. The former spoke in German and the latter in English and each spoke in an impressive manner. At the close of the service the funeral corege wended its way to the Forest Home cemetery, where interment was made. There were numerous floral offerings. Among them being a large wreath presented by the physicians and employes of the Moses Taylor hospital, where the deceased was an employe The Taylor Maennerchor society, German lodge and members of the two local fire companies attended the obsequies in a body. THE EARLIEST BOOKS.

They ere Decidedly Different from the Tomes of Today.

Frederic G. Kenyon, in Harper's Magazine A Greek book of the age of Pericles, or a Latin book of the age of Caesar, was very unlike the books to which we papyrus, a fabric made out of the pith of the Egyptian water-plant of that name. This gave a smooth and pleasant surface for writing on with the soft reeds which were then in use; but unfortunately it was not tough enough to withstand the disintegrating influences of time. In every country but one the ordinary trials of books-use, neglect, damp, insects, and the like-have caused its complete destruction. It is Egypt that it has been able to resist these agencies. During the last cenman, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Egypt that it has been able to resist church, has returned home from a vistury, and increasingly during the last twenty-five years, researches in the have yielded great quantities of manuscript upon papyrus-mostly fragments, ature which had been supposed to be Mrs. E. E. Wells, the evangelist, will hopelessly lost, and to show us by acpreach in the First Baptist church of tual examples, dating as far back as the beginning of the third century B. ... what an ancient book was like. In another and more noticeable respect than material, ancient books differed from modern. The papyrus was not cut up into leaves and bound into columes, like a modern book, but was manufactured in long rolls, which the reader unrolled as he progressed brough the work he was reading. The length of these rolls might be anything up to about thirty feet, but rarely exeeded this limit; the height would normally be about nine or ten inches. A roll of these dimensions would contain, in moderate-sized writing, an ordinary Greek play, or two books of the Iliad; but collected editions of an author's work were impossible, except in the Dwolley vs. Dwolly, (supra), and held form of a great quantity of separate the obligation was several. form of a great quantity of separate rolls. This fact goes far to explain why so many works by writers of the highest reputation have falled to come down to us. The writing on a papyrus roll was divided into columns, the width of which was regulated by the length of the verses, if the work transcribed was pal material in use for books of the best quality until the fourth century of our era; but about that time vellum, which had previously been employed mainly for inferior purposes, began to to, is approved and sustained. supersede it, and thenceforward- the best copies of books were written upon this much more durable material.

WILL NEVER BE PAID

One Debt That Would Doubly Exhaust the World's Wealth. From the New York Press.

Not all the coined money of the world would be sufficient to pay, with interest, the debt contracted by King Edward may be III, of England in 1340, when he bor- subscrib rowed an immense sum of an Italian money lender named Peruzzi. The wars with Scotland had cost

King Edward a big sum of money, and when he decided to make war on France he was compelled to apply to the head of the Peruzzi family, with whom he was on very intimate terms. He obtained £2,400,000. The Peruzzi's wanted the money after a few years had passed, and sent to King Edward for

But that monarch begged them not to nention the subject again. He eventually postponed payment for an indefinite period, and for this masterpiece of policy he was look upon by the people as a genius,

Many of the descendants of the Pe ruzzi family still live in Italy, and since 1340 they have kept up communication with the British government on the matter of their little bill. But even at a very moderate rate of interest the sum of £2,400,000 borrowed in 1340 would now have reached such colossal proportions that if the wealth of the world were gathered together it would not be sufficient to pay half of it. The total would run into twentyfive figures.

DECISION FOR DEFENDANTS

plant for $42,000 and the second party jointly agreed to pay for it. 2. The party of the second part as a further under-taking among themselves, for their own benefit and convenience, agreed to form a corporation and to subscribe to its capi-tal stock, as well as to furnish milk. It is claimed that because this arrange-ment was entered into by the defendants and included in the agreemnt between the Lumber company and them, it does not follow that their obligation to the plaintiff was changed or modified in any way. We think this is a fair statement of plaintiff's contention. We have no doubt that an agreement, such as the plaintiff maintains the instrument now before us is, could be made. But, was it made in the present case, and was it

The plaintiff's position is sustained to a great extent in the case of Davis, et al. vs. Shafer, et al., 50 Fed. Rep. 764 (1892). This case seems to stand alone. It was disapproved in Davis, et al. vs. Barber, et al., 51 Fed. Rep. 145, in the following language: "I am aware that the fore-going views are in conflict with the opinion of the circuit court for the Western district of Missouri in the case of Davis vs. Shafer (supra) recently de-cided by Judge Phillips. I have carefully examined the manuscript opinion in this case and I find myself unable to concur in the conclusion there reached." And in Davis, et al., vs. Jones (supra), the court of appeals says:
"It is worthy of notice, however, that in the case last cited, Davis vs. Shafer, the conclusion reached that the contract imposed a joint liability, was influenced, to some extent, by the view entertained by the court of the effect of a local stat-ute of the state of Missouri. (Revised states convinces us that the weight of authority is with the defendants. It does not seem that a contract like the one be fore us has been the subject of adjudi-cation in Pennsylvania. Riddle vs. Ste-vens, 2 S. & R. 536, relating to subscriptions for the support of a pastor, is cited, but it has no particular applicability to the case at bar. Davis vs. Bedford, 70 Mich. 120, deals with a contract of a similar character to the one under consideration. It was for the erection of a creamery, which Davis and Rankin agreed to build "for the sum of $4,500," payable in two instalments. This clause follows: "The subscribers thereto agree follows: to pay the above amount for said cream-ery when completed, the subscribers agreeing to accept the same as soon as completed." The contract has the fol-lowing provision: "After said organization (referring to the incorporation) is completed, said company shall issue stock to the subscribers, to the amount of their subscription hereunto annexed." court in stating the facts says: "This contract was subscribed by the names of all the defendants, and opposite their names appears the amount of each individual subscription, varying in amount from $25 to $800 each." The court con strued this contract as a whole, citin

Plaintiff's counsel claim that the clause specifically limiting the liability of the subscribers to the amount of their in-dividual subscriptions account for the rul-ings in the Michigan case, Davis vs. Murin poetry, but in the case of prose not think so. While the clause menworks it rarely exceeded three inches.

Papyrus continued to be the princiclearer, it did not control the decisions.

do not think it is necessary to continue the discussion to any greater extent. It would be premature for us now to decide the exact nature of the obliga tion created by the contract upon which the present suit is based. Whether suit brought against each individual subscriber to the stock for the amount of his subscription, or whether suit should be brought against the corporation contemplated by the agreement, if such a corporation was formed and received the benefit of the contract; these are ques-tions which are not before us now. We tions which are not before us now. simply decide that the contract in the case at bar does not impose a joint liability upon the defendants.

It was admitted at the argument that several of the defendants were served in an adjoining county and that no general apeparance had been entered for them. t was understood that as to these de fendants their names should be stricken from the record. Counsel may submit an order covering this point. Now, August 11, 1992, the several de-murrers in this case are sustained and udgment thereon is given for defendants, with costs.
