road Young Men's Christian association, occupied the pulpit of the Washburn Street Presbyterian church yes-terday morning, and preached a very forceful sermon. Following was the give to eat of the hidden manna and I will give him a white stone and in the stone a new name written."-Rev., During the course of his remarks, the speaker said:

The scene of the Christian life is a bat-tleground whereon are fought the great deciding battles of destiny. There are none of us here who have espoused the cause of Christ who do not know full well what the apostle means when he talks of the conflict of natures. When he speaks of the law in himself that so works that when he would do good, evil is present with him. We too, have fought these battles and are still fighting them and must fight on until the end. Not all who enter upon this warfare are victorious, All along the line of march may be found defeated and dishonored stragglers who have given over the fight and made shipwreck of faith. But in the midst of the smoke and tragedy of the conflict, the captain of our salvation cheers on the faithful. The sound of his voice reassures us, and, in addition to the encouragement that comes from his presence. He speaks of the coronation day when the victor lays by his armor to receive the crown.

"Seven times in these symbolic messages to the churches He tells of the that shall be 'to him that over-th.'" We are not allowed to forget that the foe is at hand, and that the battie must be fought, but we are at the same time encouraged with the prospect of victory. After the battle has been waged amid perils and blood and tears the conflict at last is over and the victory is won. I was interested in a recent sketching of that book, "Decisive Battles of the World," in which certain heroes won fame and renown, but clearly the great battle of all is missing from the volume. What depended on these decisive battles? Temporal power and prestige only, transient and fleeting, and soon to be wrenched away "by an unlineal hand no son of theirs succeeding.

But in the conflict with sin eternal interests are at stake and eternal destinies are determined. It is to those who stand unwavering in this warfare that the Mas-ter speaks. Listen to his promise of reward after the strife shall be over: "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna, and I will give him a white stone, and in the stone a new name written." Let us comprehend if we may, the significance of this threefold reward.

The word "manna" recalls the tragic experience of Israel in the wilderness. It was there in their hour or need that God sent them the manna from heaven." "Spiritual bread," the apostle calls it, and

W. W. Adair, secretary of the Rail- | the term is surely interpretative with reference to the "hidden manna" men-tioned here. He refers to it in another place where He says "Your fathers did eat manna and are dead. He that ext-eth of the bread that I shall give him shall live forever. It seems clear that "To Him that overcometh will the "hidden manna" will be unfolded to eat of the hidden manna and truth given by Jesus himself. There are give him a white stone and in hallowed by the touch of an individual, and we can not thereafter be satisfied with that music unless played by the master hand. It will be like that with the Scriptures after once we have sat at His feet and heard Him unfold them. We shall say with those of old, "Never man spake like this man," and our hearts, too, shall burn as did the hearts of the dis-ciples on the Emmaus road.

We shall hardly catch the significance of this promise about "the white stone" on the first reading. It is interesting and Important to note that it is the same original word that is translated "voice" in Paul's address before Agrippa. You remember that Paul was relating the facts about his persecution of the Christians, and he says, "When they were put to death, I was present and gave my voice against them." He is referring to the method they had of casting the bal-lot, which by the way is still in vogue in a modified form. Two kinds of pebbles were used, a white one in favor of ac-quittal and a black one for condemna-tion. The apostle deposited a black pebtion. The apostic deposited a black peo-ble signifying that he favored death. The "white stone" of the text means just the opposite—it is the emblem of imputed innocence and vindication. The man who receives it knows that he has passed from death unto life, that he is accepted in the Beloved, and that God sees him faultless through the merits of Christ. Some earthly monarchs have a way of pro-nouncing titles and conferring royal faors on an esteemed subject, but I have always had a rather cheap opinion of such honors. None of these royal courtesies keep the wolf from the door and a Knight of the Golden Eagle will starve as quick-the token of celestial honor! Let us labor to receive the white stone.

The new name will be His own new name and will be a further revelation of his character. It is worthy of note that each of the names by which we now know Him gives us a special revelation about His life and mission. His name "Jesus" recalls the divine word, "Thou shalt call His name Jesus, for He shall save His people from their sins." His name "Christ" reveals Him as "the annointed one," "the Messiah" which was to come. His name "Lord" suggests His supreme authority and His final triumph. His new David T mame will be some still further revelation Hughes. of His leveliness. When we come to know Him in this way, and when we thus sit satisfied at His feet, what will be our reflections as we look back over the check-ered way? Regret? Yes, and yet a great eeling of rejoicing. Sadness? Yes, and yet with a quiet sense of joy. Shame? Yes, but still with a mighty song of triumph that notwithstanding our failures "We are more than conquerors through Him that loved us" and that we are class-ly as an ordinary mortal. How infinitely rather strive for the favor of heaven and

The speaker chose his text from the one hundred and twenty-sixth Psalm, sixth verse, and reviewed the work accomplished by the society during the many years of its existence. The members assembled in the Sunday school room and marched to the auditorium, where they occupied front seats. Mountain Lake Becoming a Popular Resort-Two Funerals-Other Notes and Personals.

That Mountain Lake is fast becoming popular pleasure resort, is shown by the many outings and picnics held in that vicinity. Hardly a day passes during the summer months that some society or organization does not climb the mountain side to spend the day in leisure and pleasure by the lake side. What is desired to render this section the most popular place for recreation in the city is some kind of conveyance, and an extension of the Stone avenue line would prove a bonanza to the Scranton Traction company, and a blessing to the people. On Saturday there were two picnic parties on the mountain. One at Graf's grove, by the Church of Peace, and one at Baldner's park, where the employes of William Blume, the carriage maker, spent the day. The weather was all that could be wished for, and both parties enjoyed a pleasant outing. Yesterday, the Junger Maennerchot Singing society, owned the pleasure grounds at Baldner's park, and enter-
