City Solicitor Watson Went There About the Bonds.

City Solicitor George M. Watson was back at his office in the city hall yesterday, after a brief trip Monday to New York, where he consulted Judge John F. Dillon, regarding the validity of the $285,000 issue of bonds which Hayes & Sons, of Cleveland, have refused to accept. Judge Dillon is investigating the matter, not at the solicitation of the city officials, as has been published, but in the capacity of consulting attorney, for a bond house which is con-templating the purchase of the bonds. He will shortly render an opinion on the matter, copies of which will be re-ceived by the municipal authorities, and by the bond house.

If his opinion is favorable and his clients accept the bonds, this will completely establish their validity.

This would justify the city in retainng as forfeit, the $3,000 check, deposited by Hayes & Sons, when they made their original offer for the bonds. City Solicitor Watson stated yesterday that Judge Dillon appeared to to the washery.

The men he hid from were the guards himself expressed, on practically every point. Judge Dillon is not quite sure, however, that the grouping of two issues of bonds into one was a strictly legal action.

This is practically the only tangle in this Gordian knot which is to be yet posened, and Judge Dillon is now carefully reviewing a mass of information furnished him on the matter, and his opinion is soon expected.

A reward of $1,000 has been offered by the Temple Iron company for arrest of the person who did the shooting. The Edgerton washery has been running for weeks and there has been no attempt to cause trouble there. Monday there was a break down of the machinery, and it was idle for a time. To make up for this it was decided to run the washery at night, the bright moonlight making this idea feasible, No men were employed on the bank where the refuse from the washery is slushed and consequently no guards were on that part of the property.

About 10.30 o'clock Foreman Connolly went down to the slush bank to see if everything was all right. He took Crossman with him. Both of the men were unarmed. Connolly ran for the head of the bank and went down the side to get out of range of the shooter, and Crossman, who had heard the shots fired, crossed the bank and also went down the side. Connolly, supposing from the shots fired at Crossman that he was surrounded, started down the railroad racks for Mayfield as fast as his wounds would permit him to travel. Yesterday he was taken to the Scranon Private hospital.

After Crossman was shot he tried to drag himself up the railroad toward he washery, some 200 yards. It was a labor of torture and several times he sank exhausted from loss of blood and pain. Presently he heard noises and Solicitor Watson remarked yesterday: the sound of men's voices. Thinking "If the bonds are sold, they're good." the man who shot him and others were the man who shot him and others were searching for him to end his life, he crawled under a car standing on the track and remained there until the men's voices were lost in the distance. Other bullets took effect in both legs, both feet and the right and left arms and hands. When asked whether he had any suspicions as to the identity of the perpetrators of the outrage Connolly said:

"Well, to be frank, I really haven't When a man's being fired at he is hardly cool enough to make a critical examination of the fellow that's doing the shooting. This was the first night turn for Crossman and myself, as we've been working on the day shift the last three weeks. We were out on the dump totally unarmed, when we were fired at, as we'd left our revolvers in the office. There was only one man doing any shooting, as far as I could see, and he fired five shots in all. The first shot didn't hit anything, and I called out to him, not to shoot, that I was Connolly. He didn't answer, but another shot came, which hit me in the leg and hand, and struck the mine lamp, I was carrying from my hand. The indications that the slush might break charges were fired and after the explosion the holes were examined by Tillman Masher, the foreman, and Michael Arcuri, the chargeman. Both swore last night that they believed then, from their examination, that all of the charges had been exploded. Friday Dictis was sitting down holdng a wedge, used in splitting stone and Santo Jona was using a sledge on it, when a charge, which had evidently survived the explosion of ten days before, was dischared, killing

Peter Manley, who was injured by the explosion, is still in a precarious condition at the hospital, with slight chances for recovery.

Newspapers Faked Labor Day Programme and Printed It as Official, Marshal Frayne Says.

The committee of the Central Labor union, in charge of the arrangements for the Labor Day demonstration, met last night at their headquarters and decided to invite to participation in the day's celebration all locals of the United Mine Workers of America not affiliated with the Central Labor union. The locals which are affiliated have, of course, been already invited.

Grand Marshal Hugh Frayne was considerably wroth over the fact that the Times and Republican printed what purported to be the formation of the Labor Day parade. Said he last

WARNKE WASHERY TO RESUME OPERATIONS TODAY.

A Former Captain of the National Guard, Who Has Taken Charge of the Coal and Iron Police, Has Assured Mr. Warnke That His Men Will Not Be Driven Away from Place-No Truth in the Rumor About Oxford Colliery Shutting

The Warnke washery, at Duryea, will be operated today. Work will begin promptly at 7 o'clock, and General Manager Fred Warnke believes that this time the efforts of his employes will not be interefered with. Ysterday a large force of workmen and deputies were taken to the washery, and a thorough test was made of the machinery, which was damaged last Thursday. Repairs were made, where it was possible, and new machinery installed to take the place of en-

Between forty and fifty men have been engaged by Mr. Warnke to work the washery, and a squad of over twenty-five coal and iron police will endeavor to protect the workmen from molestation. Mr. Warnke declared last night that he does not expect any trouble. The police are under the command of a former captain of the National Guard, who has guaranteed Mr. Warnke that his men will not be prevented from working.

A false rumor was yesterday circulated to the effect that operations had been stopped at the Oxford colliery of the Peoples' Coal company.
