No Prospect of Arbitration. MUCH has been printed in a speculative way as to the possibilities that excited public opinion, fearing the ill effects of a winter coal famine...

The wide currency given in this connection to the views of Abram S. Hewitt, a man of life-long identification with the industry and philanthropy of our country...

Though the gold yield is visibly shrinking, it is probable that the Klondike will continue to be a bonanza for the steamship companies for several years yet.

Boycotting Teachers. (From the Wilkes-Barre Record.) THE MOST outrageous case of boycotting that has come to light since the present strike of the anthracite mine workers...

Germans for Protection. WHILE the would-be tariff smashers are endeavoring to renew their efforts to benefit foreign trade at the expense of the commercial and industrial interests of the United States...

Department of Public Instruction at Harrisburg. The public schools of Pennsylvania are in large measure under state supervision...

Marriage and Crime. IN ADDITION to all the fun and home comforts that bachelors are missing, there is authority for saying that they run a greater risk than married men of becoming criminals...

When it comes to the sacking of a captured town, there seems to be little difference between the government and insurgent troops of Venezuela.

LITERARY NOTES. Anselme's magazine, beginning with the October issue, is to be doubled in size, sold for 15 cents and converted into a competitor of the Smart Set.

A description of "Teaching by Correspondence," contributed to the September issue of the World's Work by Russell Doubleday, is in effect a study of the International Correspondence Schools and therefore of local interest.

Ralph Connor's new Gleanings stories—two delightful sketches of boy life in a field which he has already made famous—form one of the most attractive features of the September number of Leslie's Monthly.

"The World Today," the rechristened Current Encyclopedia, now aiming to occupy a field similar to that of the World's Work and the Review of Reviews, is evidently prospering.

In the September issue, John Gilmer Speed describes the methods and purposes of the much mooted beef trust, in an article entitled "The Beef Trust and the Public." He gives a very thorough meaning of the reasons for the trust and its relations to the general public.

Lovers of the works of Robert Louis Stevenson will read with interest an article in Harper's Magazine for September, entitled "In the Footsteps of Robert Louis Stevenson," by William Sharp.

"A Friend of Curran," by Louise Betts Edwards, the novelette with which the September Smart Set opens, is a character study at once distinctive and strong. The analysis is subtle in its revelation of a woman's nature.

Among the scientific men who went to the West Indies on the Dixie relief expedition, for the purpose of studying the phenomena of the eruptions of May 7-8, were Professor Robert T. Hill, geologist, United States geological survey, and Israel C. Russell, professor of geology in the university of Michigan.

Walter A. Wyckoff, the author of "The Workers," begins a new series in the September Scribner's dealing with the conditions which surround the wage-earner in England.

A. Randolph Dugmore, the artist-sportsman and photographer of outdoor life, is at present in the Maine woods. On his return he will contribute a series of elaborately illustrated articles on camping, fishing and hunting to Country Life in America.

William Allen White has got into the game again, and takes the leading place in the September McClure's with an article on "Cuban Respectability, a Moral Issue," in which he speaks his mind about beet roots and insurgents and the administration policy—while, incidentally, happens to be Mr. White's policy, too.
