William H. Sherwood, of Hartford, won the first prize in The Tribune's Educational Contest for the largest number of points brought in during the month of August. A. J. Kellerman, of Scranton, won the second prize offered and William T. S. Rodriguez, of Scranton, won the third prize.

Mr. Sherwood scored 221 points during the month, or 35 points more than Mr. Kellerman. Of these, he brought in 144 on Saturday. Mr. Kellerman had 96 points to spare over Mr. Rodriguez, who had 17 points more than Hendrick Adams, the fourth in the list.

Mr. Sherwood deserves winning the best of the three prizes, for he has worked unceasingly to increase his score. Hartford is about thirty-five miles from Scranton and is a small town, and although Mr. Sherwood's townspeople have encouraged him and aided him to the very best of their ability in his laudable ambition to win a good education, he has had to scour the neighboring villages and towns for additional help. From Montrose, on the west, Susa Shanna on the east, from Binghamton to Clark's Summit, he has travelled on his wheel over the rough, mountainous roads in a heartfelt desire to not only win a prize for the best month's work, but also to go advance in the list that when the contest closed he would be so high up that he could pick out a scholarship suited to his future ambitions and not have to take what was left. By his untiring zeal, he has advanced wonderfully during the month just closed, and instead of being eleventh, as he was on August 1, he is now sixth.

A number of the friends of Mr. Kellerman will be surprised to learn that he did not carry off the month's honors, after having led all through August until the last day. Surprises, however, are always to be expected in events of this sort.

William Rodriguez, who wins the third of the prizes offered, came up from seventh in the list of the August leaders, as published on Saturday, scoring 363 points that day, or more than double the score he had previously during the month. Mr. Rodriguez's picture could not be secured in time for this morning's issue, but will be published tomorrow.

Yesterday's Changes.

Two very important changes occurred in the list of leaders in the contest as a consequence of the winding up of the August contest.

William T. S. Rodriguez, who was fifth on Saturday morning, has passed Oscar H. Kipp, of Elmhurst, at Albert Freedman, of Bellefonte, and is now third, 19 points ahead of Mr. Freedman and 184 points behind Charles

FOR SON'S DROWNING.

Lackawanna and Taylor Are Alleged to Be Responsible.

Edward and Mary Gallagher, of Taylor, brought suit Saturday for $25,000 damages against Taylor borough and Lackawanna township, for the death of their son.

At the time of the flood, last March, young Gallagher and a number of companions were on the bridge connecting Minoaka and Taylor, watching the rushing waters. A guard rail against which the Gallagher boy was leaning broke, and he fell into the river. The swift current carried him away so rapidly that no attempt to rescue him could be made.

The river at this point is the boundary line between Lackawanna township and Taylor borough and the bridge is jointly owned by the two municipalities. On this account they are both made defendants. Negligence is alleged on the ground that the guard rail was insecure and that this condition was known to the defendants.

SOME EFFECTS OF THE STRIKE

SHORTAGE CAUSED BY SUSPENSION OF MINING.

Frederick E. Saward Expresses the Opinion That When Work Resumes Consumers Will Carry Much Heavier Stocks—Mines Can Run 1,000,000 Tons in Excess of Production for Perhaps Two Years—Average Consumption in Good Times Is Over 4,000,000 Tons Per Month.

From an article on the effects of the strike in the New York Commercial Advertiser by Frederick E. Saward, we call the following:

The shortage due to the strike has been perhaps 3,000,000 tons; the suspension having lasted about four months, one might naturally suppose that the loss would have been greater, but it is well known that the mines are not worked steadily every day in the month, there being what is called "short time." This being so, when the mines are pushed to their utmost, the total could be even greater than the average monthly output noted, which brings one to the proposition as to when the lost tonnage, so called, can be made good. This year the tonnage that may be mined will go to meet an actual demand, and there will be no hoarding back of the coal supply. In other words, anything that was formerly classed as "surplus" will just restore the market to normal conditions.

Prices will decline almost immediately after the announcement of resumption is made, although they will not at once come to the schedule as retail conditions prevailed last year, because every one will think that the time is at hand for putting in his winter stock, and this will keep up prices for a time, but ultimately there will be a rebound to normal conditions. After one of the old-time strikes, when prices had advanced as high as this year, there was a precipitate decline early to a certain extent, and then a gradual reduction to normal. The same result will obtain on this occasion. There is the very solid balance wheel of a community of interests among producers and consumers which is not inclined to do anything to put up values. In the old days of individual operations this was not done.

WILL CARRY BIGGER STOCKS.

One thing may be relied upon as of fundamental value and importance, and that is that the producers are evidently not at all likely to be caught with so small tonnage heretofore as that which was on hand at the beginning of this year. Their stock of coal will be much more lively for all the anthracite coal concerns for some time to come. In order to do this there will be the opening up of new collieries and the general improvement of mining by the larger companies, and efforts will be made for a more direct distribution of the production, so that transportation facilities will go to their advantage. The coal which can be readily reached markets will be sent in that direction, and there will be no unnecessary haulage of any of the varieties to other and more distant markets. It is proposed, if the plan is carried out, to ship most, if not all, of certain coal now going into the territory of the other coal roads to certain markets, thereby securing the benefit of the longer haul over its own lines.

The Reading has advantages not possessed by any great extent by the other regions in its thousands of acres of coal land still undeveloped, and in developing this to supply the nearest markets there will be solved the problem of prompt supply to the Atlantic seaboard and towns, without the necessity of an increased cost to the consumer.

One thing has been proven beyond peradventure of doubt, by this four-month's siege, and that is that what one might call the "invisible supply" of hard coal was much larger than any one thought; there was a right to expect, always in certain places at not much above normal figures, and in some instances at a disadvantage. In New York, there has been considerable suffering from the shortage of the yards on expensive water fronts. Something must be done in the future to provide more ample supplies, in case of any stoppage of production and delivery from any cause. In any event, the situation may be summed up as follows:

WILL CONTROL PRODUCTION.

When the mines are in full operation— which for certain reasons will not be inside of a month after "resumption"— the output for the first month of full operation should approach 4,000,000 tons. Shortage of labor will prevent full production at the outset, and the men will be "soft" after their long idleness and unable to work with their usual effect and productiveness. After one month of exceptional tonnage, movement by rail may become congested and tonnage fall to between 3,000,000 and 3,500,000 tons. After that it should run steadily at very nearly 3,000,000.

The average consumption in good times has been shown to be a little over 4,000,000 tons per month. Owing to the shortage caused by the strike, bituminous coal was substituted for some anthracite requirements, and thus the net shortage during the strike probably does not exceed 7,000,000 or 8,000,000 tons (to Sept. 1). To this, however, for the future, must be added the coal which will be hoarded by consumers—10,000,000 tons— and dealers—3,000,000 to 4,000,000 tons—against an interruption of supply, making a total of fully 20,000,000 tons. It can safely be said, therefore, that the mines can run at 1,000,000 tons a month in excess of actual consumers' requirements for at least twenty months, or even say two years, to come. There will be no business excess of supply over demand at any time during 1903 or 1904 unless the political campaign in the latter part of 1901 introduces alarming features. Normal tonnage for a series of years should be very close to 60,000,000 tons per annum—actual shipments, in gross tons, as per the usual table.

Prices after resumption will, at wholesale, be as determined in the spring. Ad-
