Van Scoter, of Shamokin, a former private in the regiment, responded on behalf of the soldiers. Addresses were also delivered by Milton W. Lowry, of this city; Rev. H. H. Harris, of Taylor, and several others. The choir of the Wyoming Methodist Episcopal church sang a number of patriotic selections, which were thoroughly appreciated.

D. M. Jones, of Wilkes-Barre, recited an original poem, and letters of re-gret and congratulation from General Chamberlain, of Maine; General Bragg, of Cuba, and Admiral Dewey were read. Rev. Blair, I. G. Shocmaker, M. W. Lowry and others were elected honorary members of the association, and badges were presented to them by Comrade Holgate, of LaPlume.

MR. LOWRY'S ADDRESS.

The time and place for holding the next reunion was left to the officers to decide. The speech of Mr. Lowry voked great applause. It follows: In the noonday of historic Greek chiv alry, her martial heroes were wont to as-semble, in honor of her soldiery, and recount the deeds of prowess and patriotism rendered by her sons, who purchased, by hardship and sacrifice, her glory crowned

It was thus in Rome; her forum often rang with acclamations and applicate for her military chieftains and their co-horts, who had triumphed in conquest, or turned back the tide of hostile invasion from her dominions.

So in all ages, the chivalric spirit of mankind has given ready response to deeds of valor, and heroism; and this inherent characteristic, has been approved and encouraged, by the intelligent judgment of christendom, by such measure as the principle involved, is noble and pure. By this standard, then, I count you most fortunate, gentlemen of the Grand Army of the Republic; for the time is past, when we may be justly accused of a too favorable prejudice; since the nearly forty years which lie between those southern scenes of carnage, and this hour, have sufficed to prove the justice of your cause, not only to neutral powers, but admittedly, to the vanquished Confederate foe, as well. In no problem of national life, more than in the subject of martial strife and feats of arms, can

It should be accounted an honor to participate in the exercises of the great surviving column of men who have deservedly received such renown; and I estecenthis occasion, most happy, because you have called upon me, to lend my poor efforts in recounting and emphasizing those memories, so buoyant and stirring to the hearts of a true people.

MINGLED FEELINGS.

While it is a time of rejoicing, it is nevertheless, joy with mingled feelings of sorrow and regret. Joy for the achievements won, and foundations laid, which shall live after the marble crumbles and the brass fades; sorrow for the unfilled ranks, and spaces in your line of files, growing wider and ever wider as the years go by: regret that se much of the young flower and noble man-hood of our nation, had to be sacrificed upon the fields of battle, which you have survived; and alone enjoy with your well earned mead of praise.

This takes us back in memory, to some comrade face, last seen on earth, perchance, by the lurid fires of burning timbers in the "wilderness," in the smoke of "Spottsylvania," "Cold Harbor," or under the walls of Petersburg. These boys fell, a sacrifice to the loftlest theme of inspiration in words or song; they lie be-neath the southern pine, or cypress, "where the unmarked sod last hid the loving face, where graves remain un-decked." In this expression of devotion, men "even dared to die" that their cour try might live and inure to the benefit and glory of all.

and glory of all.

As man's life is a field of toil, so a nation is beset with its vicissitudes and conflicts, and it grows from strength to strength by the discipline of struggle, in a just cause. We have had our fair share of war clouds and battle shock, and have, thereby well earned the potential position, so recently attained, among the nations of the carth.

Hardly had our colonies began life upon this new-found shores, ere they learned that their sentiments, nay, life itself depended upon the most vigilant warfare. First the Indian, next the French, and in the concluding peace with France, we then determined that the decaying institutions of the middle ages should not prevail on the western shores of the Atlantic, but that the powerful language, laws and liberties of the English speaking race should be planted erful language, laws and liberties of the English speaking race should be planted forever throughout the New World. How prophetic were the words of John Adams, then a young school teacher of Connecticut, who wrote in his diary, "In another century all Europe will not be able to subdue us, the only way to keep us from setting up for ourselves, is to dis-unite us." While we were yet English colonies, the spirit of independence and confident strength was dominant and potent among the pioneers of that little union.

acing our inalienable rights and liberties. After peace was concluded and our revolutionary struggle ended, hardly a generation had passed when in 1811 Commo dore Rodger, of the frigate "President" hailing an English vessel, received, not a polite answer, but a cannon ball in the main mast; whereupon he reciprocated in true American fushion, and by promptly disposing of the British ship, precipi-tated the war of 1812. This short and historic conflict chronicled the names of Decatur, Hull, Lawrence, Paul Jones, Bainbridge and Perry, of Lake Eric fame, with many a brilliant action in arms; but it remained for the intropid

PURCELL-DOUGHERTY WAS CON-CLUDED YESTERDAY.

The Case of A. D. Spencer and Others Against the Nay Aug Coal Company Was Then Taken Up-Richard Bell of Moscow Sues the D., L. & W. Company-Grand Jury Will Make Its Report Today-Appeal from Conviction Before an Alder-

The equity suit of William L. Purcell against T. J. Dougherty was resumed yesterday morning before Judge Dunham when the following witnesses were examined for the plaintiff: Mrs. Andrew Knox, Peter O'Horo, William Cotter, Thomas Langan and Prof. Howell. Most of them testified that there was an alley running back to the Purcell property for years and years. For the defense James Segur, James

Young, A. J. Widener, John Cordy, Dan

Purcell, J. H. Cook, W. J. Costello, Harry Spencer and Mark Simpson were sworn all of whom were positive that a barn stood for many, many years where Purcell says there was an alley. After this case was closed Judge Dunham took the equity case of A. D. Spencer and others against the Nay Aug company, an action to restrain the defendant from mining coal from the land of the plaintiff in Dunmore and to compel an accounting of the coal mined. Attorney S. B. Price and J. E. Burr appeared for the plaintiff and Attorneys Everett Warren, W. J. Hand, and W. H. Jessup for the defense.

These most prominent among the great Major Warren asked the court to say leaders which you followed "to glory or that the plaintiff had no standing in an equity court since they had a remedy at law. This request was opposed by Mr. Spencer and the matter was argued at some length. Judge Dunham refused the request and testimony in the case will be taken today.

New Fall Tailored Gowns

For street wear or traveling, are also on exhibition and the stock will be fully complete within the next ten days.

Many Ladies' are averse to wearing ready-to-wear garments, because they have read so much about the dirt and squalor of the "sweat-shops."

We have simply to say that we are thoroughly familiar with factories and work rooms where all our Ready-to-Wear Garments are made, and can assure our patrons that there is no cause for fear on the grounds mentioned above. Every garment offered by us is made in well lighted, well ventilated work rooms, where the sanitary arrangements are perfect, and the work people clean and well paid. We can prove this statement if need be.
