STRENUOUS DAY OF DEMOCRATS

Held Three Conventions, One of Which Was of a Rather Enlivening Character.

TWO CANDIDATES ARE NAMED FOR CONGRESS

The Majority Faction Endorses Hon. William Connell and the Minority Names George Howell—Latter Secured Control of the Convention Machinery by Main Strength and Refused to Recognize Any One Other Than Their Own Adherents. Turbulent Scenes Result from This Action—M. F. Sando and T. P. Hoban Both Named for Orphans' Court Judge—P. F. Calpin Chosen as the Candidate for Senate—W. P. Litts Named for the Legislature in the Third District.

With about all the convention excitement that could be well crowded into the day, the Lackawanna Democrats, yesterday, nominated two tickets, the one headed by Congressman William Connell, the Republican nominee, and the other by George Howell.

The delegates who were supporters of M. P. Flynn for chairman were prevented from having any part in the proceedings of the convention called at Music hall, and leaving the convention in a body, met in Melvin's hall on upper Lackawanna avenue, organized the Independent Democratic party and named a ticket as follows:

For Congress—Hon. William Connell.

For Orphans' Court Judge—Thomas P. Hoban.

For County Commissioners—John J. Durkin and Victor Burschell.

For Mine Inspectors—P. J. Moore and Patrick Blewitt.

The delegates who adhered to John J. Fahey for chairman had two sessions at Music hall and nominated the following ticket:

For Congress—George Howell.

For Orphans' Court Judge—Hon. M. F. Sando.

For County Commissioners—John J. Durkin and Victor Burschell.

For Mine Inspector—P. J. Moore.

The split was the result of high-handed proceedings on the part of the Fahey faction to defeat the will of the majority of the delegates who wanted to endorse the candidacy of Congressman Connell. Alleging that the state rules authorize it and that the state rules were applicable to a county convention, the Fahey-Schadt-Lynett faction had the executive committee appoint Fahey as chairman in place of County Chairman T. P. Hoban, who was absent on account of the death of his mother, and then by ousting most of the Flynn delegates with the aid of fake contests, and by refusing to entertain motions other than those proposed by the Fahey faction, they got full control and went through some semblance of convention business.

CONVENTION WAS BOSSSED BY FAHEY

The Fahey adherents knew the night before that they would be outnumbered in the convention and set out at once to overcome numbers by strategy. Men on whom they could rely were sent for to report at Hotel Schadt at 9 o'clock in the morning to act as contestants. The regularly elected delegates who were pledged to vote for Fahey and the contestants who were to be substituted for the Flynn men were each provided with a blue Academy of Music door check and instructed to line up in front of the door of the convention hall.

Yellow tickets of admission with County Chairman Hoban's name printed thereon were prepared the night before for distribution among all the delegates, but the Fahey crowd did not take any of them. The Flynn delegates were given these yellow tickets at the Valley house.

About 10:30 o'clock the leaders of the Fahey faction gained an entrance to Music hall from Center street, and took possession of the stage. Sheriff Schadt then went to the Lackawanna avenue entrance, which was guarded by Park Policeman Callahan, Deputy Sheriff John J. Coyne, Emmet Gurrell, and a number of other stalwart adherents of the sheriff. Captain Williams and a squad of six patrolmen were standing about waiting for anything that might turn up which would demand their attention. Sheriff Schadt thought it a good idea to have the police force give him a hand in carrying out the Fahey programme, and summoning Captain Williams, showed him that the blue tickets and informed him that none but those bearing the blue ticket should be admitted.

BLUES HAD RIGHT OF WAY.

The Fahey men coming from the east and the Flynn men coming from the west were each jammed solidly against each other and both against the doors. At a signal from the sheriff the doors were swung open and the crush began. A delegate who would hold up a blue ticket would be pulled out of the jam by one of Schadt's assistants and passed on into the hallway. A delegate displaying a yellow ticket would be pushed back and away and not infrequently roughly handled. The Flynn men protested and threatened and raved, but it was of no avail. Schadt and his allies held firm.

For about fifteen minutes the wending out process continued. Then Sheriff Schadt saw there were no more blue tickets being held up, and figuring that all his men were safely inside and occupying the delegates' chairs, instructed the police and his other door tenders to get the crowd in indiscriminately. Moved, the yellow ticket delegates and the spectators crushed into the hallway and up the steps into the hall, to find the Fahey man holding the stage and downstairs seats and ready to proceed with their programme.

Without waiting for quiet, Secretary John P. Mahon advanced to the front of the stage and hurriedly mumbled something about "authority" and "rules" and "John J. Fahey, chairman." Fahey assumed the chairmanship and called upon Martin Cadden to read the call. This being done the roll was proceeded with. Cadden read the names as rapidly as he could possibly read and without any particular effort to make himself heard. As he read the roll the delegates crowded around the stage and handed up their credentials. Any old body could hand up any old thing at any old time, and it was accepted by Assistant Secretary John Corbett as a credential. He gathered them in with both hands and after he had the same set fast Chairman Fahey had to give him a hand.

COLEMAN MADE NOISE.

Delegates kept calling for order and challenging this and that, but most would be capped passing up credentials, but no heed was paid to their cries. Select Councilman Edward Coleman stood near the stage and led in the tumult making by slamming the apron of the stage with a big heavy cane and cheering like wild.

Thus the thing went on for seven or eight minutes. No one except those on the stage knew what was doing. The Fahey delegates and substitutes joined in the cheering and other forms of noise making while the Flynn men looked on wonderingly waiting for the convention to proceed, only occasionally breaking their silence by calling for order, or making complaint that some man or other who would be seen passing up credentials was an usurper.

Finally, when the roll call was completed and the credentials all in, Assistant Secretary Cadden read an announcement to the effect that in the absence of the chairman, the executive committee, under authority of the party rules, had appointed John J. Fahey chairman, and John P. Mahon, John M. Corbett, Martin Cadden and Charles Graf as secretaries.

Immediately Chairman Fahey appointed the usual committees and went on writing to take the next breath, declared a motion to adjourn which was in order. The motion was made from the floor, nobody could be heard voting against it and the chair declared the convention adjourned until 2 o'clock.

GREW SUSPICIOUS.

The Flynn men, who had given up their credentials, began to suspect after adjournment, that they were to be ousted by the Faheyites' committee on contested seats, and during the recess they got together to devise some means of blocking the game. A caucus was called for 1 o'clock at Melvin's hall, on upper Lackawanna avenue. It was agreed to go into the convention at 2 o'clock and move to substitute M. P. Flynn for John J. Fahey as chairman, when the convention came to effect permanent organization. Despite some desertions by delegates, the caucus was held with the victors and who believed the Faheyites would win out, the Flynnites still had a good majority.

The Fahey adherents met at Hotel Schadt at 1 o'clock to fix up their afternoon's programme. It was decided to proceed with the nominations and other business after a cut and dried fashion and refuse to recognize any one not of their fold.

At 2 o'clock the janitor of Music hall threw open the doors and everybody went in without let or hindrance. Delegates and spectators were mixed up indiscriminately. Every seat was taken, and the aisles and space at either side of the stage were fairly filled to overflowing. A squad of eight patrolmen, under command of Captain Williams, took stations along the wall at either side of the hall and kept a broad daylight with a couple of more patrolmen took places in the rear.

SLOW IN COMING.

The leaders of the Fahey contingent were slow in putting in an appearance, and a suspicion grew apace that they were holding the convention at some other hall. Some of the Flynn men were discussing the advisability of leaving Mr. Flynn take the platform and start the convention all over again, when the Faheyites leaders arrived. Chairman Fahey, Sheriff Schadt, Colonel Fitzsimmons, Attorney John J. Murphy and the three secretaries ascended the stage and proceeded to get the convention going. Fahey's appearance at the chairman's table was greeted with a mixture of cheers and hisses, words of commendation and cat-calls.

Chairman Fahey tapped the convention to order and called for the report of the committee on permanent organization. B. A. Kelly, of Carbondale, chairman of the committee, reported that the committee recommended making the temporary organization permanent. Assistant Secretary Cadden jumped to the front of the stage, put a motion to adopt the recommendation and, without calling for the "noes," declared the motion adopted.

John Gibbons, Jr., and a number of other Flynn men were clamoring for recognition that they might move to substitute the name of M. P. Flynn as chairman. No one would pay any heed to them, however, and the only thing they could do was to keep on clamoring.

Both sides yelled and cheered, and hissed and whistled, and called out all sorts of suggestions. Half of those present were on their feet trying to talk or else joining in the yell. The noise was simply terrific. Chairman Fahey at the first lull nodded to M. P. Flynn, who was just to the front of the platform demanding recognition.

SAID HE WAS TOO LATE.

"I want that motion put," said Mr. Flynn. "If you have a majority of the votes you ought not be afraid to put the motion." "You are too late, sir," declared the

NON-SUIT IN MILLER CASE

GRANTED BY JUDGE AFTER PLAINTIFF RESTED.

Application for a Non-Suit in the Case of Martin Dolphin Against the Borough of Dunmore—It is Asked for on the Ground That the Plaintiff Contributed to the Accident to His Son—Another Suit Caused by the Spring Floods on the Docket-town Flats.

After the evidence for the plaintiff was all in yesterday in the ejectment case of W. G. Miller against George W. Cramer and John Cure an application for a non-suit was made by the attorneys for the defense and allowed by Judge Newcomb on the ground that the land was not properly described.

Before Judge Edwards the case of the Chase Brothers company, Rochester nurserymen, against Dr. S. W. Lamoreaux was called. The plaintiffs sued to recover $100 for blackberry bushes furnished to Dr. Lamoreaux, and for which he did not pay. There was no appearance for the defendant and a verdict of $120 claim and costs was awarded the plaintiffs.

The suit of Martin Dolphin against the borough of Dunmore was next called before Judge Edwards. He asks $10,000 for the death of his 19-month-old boy. While the father had the boy out walking on Webster avenue, Dunmore, in April, 1900, they came to a place where at the crossing the sidewalk was very much higher than the roadway and the child fell in getting down and fractured his hip. While the child's leg was encased in plaster of paris he contracted pneumonia and died. Dolphin is represented by Attorneys C. Balentine and George Howell and the borough by Borough Solicitor J. W. McDonald and J. H. Burns.

After the evidence for the plaintiff was in Attorney Burns asked for a non-suit on the ground that the father contributed to the accident the child suffered and that there was not sufficient evidence that the accident caused death. Mr. Burns made his argument based on these propositions and Mr. Balentine will reply to him this morning.

Just as the case of Bridget Golden against the Scranton Railway company was about to go to trial yesterday morning a continuance pending settlement was requested and granted. The plaintiff has a property on Railroad avenue which she claims has been damaged to the extent of $5,000 by the raising of the grade of the street.

Wants $5,000 Damages.

Thomas H. Williams, through his attorney, A. A. Chase, yesterday began an action to recover $5,000 damages from the following corporations: Wilkes-Barre and Scranton Railway company, Central Railroad of New Jersey, Scranton Steel company, Scranton Gas and Water company and Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad company.

Orphans' Court Matters.

In the Orphans' court yesterday, Judge A. A. Vosburg heard the audits in the estate of James P. Riley, minor child of Bernard Riley, deceased. Attorney John F. Reynolds appeared for the accountant. No claims were presented against the estate and evidence was offered to show that the accountant has settled with the minor in full, and that the minor is now 21 years of age. A release was offered in evidence and the evidence showed that the money had been paid to which the minor was entitled.

In the estate of Daniel Howell, deceased, Attorney L. M. Schoch appeared for the executors, and Attorney M. J. Martin for the accountant, and evidence was offered showing that the parties had settled the matters in controversy amicably, and it was agreed that the exceptions filed might be sustained to a sufficient amount so that there would be no indebtedness from the estate of Daniel Howell to Franklin P. Howell and from Jennie Dean to Franklin P. Howell. The balance of the exceptions are to be dismissed under the terms of the agreement. This disposes of all matters in controversy, and by agreement the account was confirmed absolutely.
