

iam Price-Beautiful Tribute to His ·Character by Judge Edwards.

yesterday afternoon at the family resi-dence, on South Main avenue, in the presence of a large circle of sorrowing relatives and friends. Rev. J. P. Mof-

A male quartette, led by John T. Watkins, sang a number of selections, and a touching address was delivered by Hon. H. M. Edwards, a life-long friend and neighbor of deceased. He said:

It may be considered as somewhat unusual that a layman should say anything on an occasion like this. And I would be very unwilling to break upon an ancient and an honorable custom were it not that I speak a few words today in compliance with the urgent request of the members of this bereaved family. But this request is not my only excuse. I am further insnired by my friendship for the departed, my knowledge of his character and my admiration of his many virtues. After all, why should not one friend say a few words about another who is gone? Why should he not weave a garland of affection and place it upon his friend's casket? And why should he not scatter flowers upon his grave and shed tears of regret and sorrow? Everyone in my presence can well say:

"I have lost a friend." Mr. Price and myself came to this city in the same myself came to this city in the same year, and we have been next door neigh-bors for nearly thirty years. I can safe-ly say that there is no one person, out-side of my family, whom I have seen, spoken to and shaken hands with often-er than Mr. Price. This is particularly true as to the last five years. He gave me his confidence and I participated in his joys and sorrows. I am therefore glad of the opportunity to speak of him glad of the opportunity to speak of him as I found him and to tell you what manner of a man my friend was. I know you will agree with me when I say that our! friend was a great lover of nature. He enjoyed the gladness of spring and the glory of summer. He was fond of flowers and trees and the things that grow out of the earth. We find the evidences of this around us. The vines that adorn the church building next door and the trees in front of his own home, as well as in front of mine, were his gifts and were planted by him. He watched their growth carefully and lovingly and tended them with willing hands. About three weeks before he died he said to me: "When I am gone, if I leave nothing else to be remembered by, these trees in front of our hemes will these trees in front of our homes will be my monuments."

I may say also of our friend that he was a sturdy, stalwart man. Were it not for the accidents he met in the later per-iod of his life, he would probably have lived ten years longer. He was cast in the heroic mold. He was not of the type

Although not edu cated in the learning of the schools, I was endowed with mental vigor. He had his own opinions about men and things fat, D. D., pastor of the Washburn Street Presbyterian church, read the scripture lesson and offered prayer. A male quartette, led by John T. Watkins, sang a number of selections,

Wales, whose early emigrants were largely instrumental in founding the Welsh Barony, around Philadelphia,more especially the township of Merion. He came from among the rugged hills of North Wales and he spent his boyhood days amidst Alp-like scenery. A few hours' journey would take him to the base of cloud-capped Snowdon, and not for among he could save Blindlimmon and far away he could see Plimlimmon and Cader Idris, with their bold headlines. I mention this because it accounts largely for his manly vigor, physical and mental and for his strong, sturdy character. He was of the hills and was solid like them. But I can say much more than this about our friend. He lived a correct life; he was honest and honorable in all his dealings; he had a very tender heart;

he was generous and charitable; he was loyal to his friends; he honored all the ties of domestic life. Happy are those of whom it can be said: "He was a good citizen, a good husband, a good father and a good friend."

The memory of the departed and of his kindly virtues will remain with his family and friends as a treasure for many years to come

At the close of the service, the re mains were viewed by many people, who had been intimately associated and acquainted with Mr. Price. The interment will be privately conducted th's morning at the Washburn street cemetery.

The honorary pall bearers will b Evan J. Davis, Daniel Williams, Alexander Barrowman, George E. Fairchilds, Dr. W. E. Allen and Thomas Eynon. The active bearers will be four of deceased's oldest employes, William Hitchings, Gomer James, John Carney and Edward Weed.

Among the out-of-town people in attendance at the services yesterday were: Prof. J. Parson Price and Enoch Evans, of New York; J. P. Jones, of Pottsville; Mrs. Margaret Thomas, Spring Brook; Mrs. Oliver, Wilkes-Barre, and Mrs. Mary James, Kingston.

Forty Hours Devotion.

Forty hours' devotional services began at St. Patrick's church yesterday morning, with a high mass at 10.30 o'clock, at which Rev. J. P. Dunne was celebrant. This was followed by a special period of adoration by members of the congregation in the afternoon. The services at the church last evenng were largely attended, Rev. J. J. O'Donnell, of Olyphant, preaching the sermon. His text was from St. John,

"I am the good shepherd, I know mine, mine know me." He dwelt upon the importance of persons caring for their souls, the dangers that await them in SOUTH SCRANTON making delays, and the injustice to God in putting aside salvation. The speaker also touched upon the value of the soul, and the sacrifice God made in sending his only begotten Son to suffer for the sins of mankind. He also spoke of the rewards awaiting the faithful and the punishment that will be meted out to the unfaithful, petitioning his hearers to avail themselves in these special days of grace, and at all times, of the opportunities to embrace salvation, and become Christians and remain true under all circumstances.

Masses will be said at 6.30, 7 and 8 o'clock this morning, the last mass being a high mass. Confessions will he heard, commencing at 9 a. m., and continuing throughout the afternoon and evening.

The sermon this evening will be preached by Rev. Lalor R. McLoughlin, of St. Peter's Cathedral. The masses tomorrow morning will be at 5, 6 and 8 o'clock, with benedictions and confessions during the afternon and evening. The early masses will be at 5, 6 and 7 o'clock on Wednesday morning, and at Rev. Peter Christ, and the masses fol-9 o'clock there will be a solemn high mass, followed by the litany.
