The second call for troops also came from Priceburg. About 5.30 p. m., a mob assaulted an old man who was returning from work at the Johnson No. 2 colliery of the Ontario and Western ompany, and another mob assaulted we men going to work. All three were badly used up. The two mobs, augmented by others who were gathered by the turnult, joined in an attack on he colliery.

The guards employed at the colliery held the mob at bay, but could not disperse them because, in the first place, the attackers numbered three hundred, and the second place, they sheltered themselves behind a vanguard of wonen and children. Twice the guards attempted to "rush" the crowd with lrawn revolvers, but the women, holdng their children in front of them, blocked their way. Not being able to return the attack without injuring and ossibly killing women and children, the guards had to retreat.

MOB ADVANCED.

The mob then advanced and stationed tself between the Main street and the Johnson breaker on the hill to the west. The workmen on the day shift who wanted to come out were held prisoners in the breaker, while those of the night shift, who wanted to go in, did not dare approach. The mob was beginning to move towards the breaker when a special train with two companies of the Thirteenth, under command of Major Field, steamed into the mine switch. The crowd scattered like chaff before the wind, and by the time the soldiers reached the position the mob had occupied there was nothing but distant fugitives in sight. The soldiers escorted the night shift in, and the day shift out, without en-countering trouble. A small group of soldiers, escorting a non-union man, was passing a house in the mine settle nent when two Hungarians, one wit an axe and the other with a big knife, rushed out to the fence and, brandishing their weapons, shouted threats at

He tried to open it and found it locked. Knocks and calls failing to bring a response. Vail put his shoulder to the door, burst it in and a moment later appeared with the two culprits in custody. He also secured the axe and knife. The prisoners were taken to the camp and placed in the guard house. They will be turned over to Sheriff Schadt this morning.

HE CALLED NAMES.

Another man, who called the soldiers opprobrious names, was placed under arrest, but at the solicitation of the president of the local of the United Mine Workers, who promised to escort the man home, Major Field allowed him to go.

The soldiers remained on duty a Priceburg until late at night. They will be there again at early morn.

While this excitement was on a Priceburg, one of the most serious disturbances of the strike was occurring for duty, and; to that end, has sent out at the adjoining towns of Jessup and Peckville.

Two non-union men returning from work at the Sterrick Creek colliery of the Temple Iron company were held up and assaulted at the Delaware and Hudson crossing, near the Jessup-Peck-ville station, by a crowd of foreigners. a general hunt for non-union men. Half-a-dozen groups of workmen returning from the various collieries were attacked by as many different crowds of strikers and for an hour or two there were running fights all over the neighborhood. Some of the worst of the fighting took place on the Main street of Peckville. Shots were frequently exchanged but as far as could be learned no one was hit. It was reported that four of the strikers received bullet wounds but this could not be verified Immediately upon receipt of word o the disturbance, Colonel Watres sent Captain Kambeck and two companies to the scene. At the approach of th troop train the turbulence suddenly Word of their coming had evidently been sent ahead from some place in Olyphant.

Finding nothing to engage his attention Captain Kambeck after scouring the town for an hour took his men back to camp. At 7.30 word came that the trouble had broken out anew, and another and bigger detatchment hurried back under command of Major Robling and Captain Kambeck. They found the town again quiet, their coming having probably been telephoned ahead. The second outbreak was in the nature of assaults on non-union men who were caught stealing home under cover of darkness from places of refuge they had hurriedly sought during the first disturbance. No trouble was encountered. Other detatchments under command of captains were sent in various directions on patrol duty. Jessup, Grassy Island, Olyphant Flats, Priceburg and Throop were all visited. The patrols reported the region to be perfectly quiet and that not even one striker's picket was abroad as far as they could find,

TO PATROL THE VALLEY.

Colonel Watres said he will thoroughly patrol the whole valley as long as appears expedient. The soldiers, he said, are simply instructed to see to it that no disorder occurs, "Any man," said the colonel, "who wants to go to work will be able to do so without being molested."

As yet there has been little or no dem onstration of hostility towards the soldiers made by the strikers. Crowds constantly surround the camp in the day time looking on interestedly at the activities within the lines, but the only words that pass between them and the soldiers are commonplaces of a not unpleasant nature.

Wajelack Majewsky, who was shot at the Ridge Tuesday, was reported to be dying yesterday. William Burnett, a guard at the Raymond colliery, has been arrested on suspicion of having fired the shot. Majewsky identified him as the one who shot at him. The occused and the company officials deny that any shot was fired near the coliery Tuesday, and assert that Majewsky was shot during the attack on the breaker the night before. WHAT HE SAID. When asked what effect on the strike situation the presence of troops would have, President Nicholls said: "I do not know that it will have any particular effect. So far it seems to have benefitted us. I have received reports today to the effect that twenty-one men quit work today at Priceburg; that most of the men at the Avondale and Plymouth No. 2 collieries have joined the ranks of the strikers and that others are to quit as soon as they are paid off by the companies.'

At the offices of the coal companies emphatic denial was made of the stories concerning desertions from the collieries and washeries.

President John Gibbons of the school board waited on District President Nicholls, yesterday, to arrange for a conference between the district board of the United Mine Workers and the special committee of the school board appointed Monday night to deal with the question of securing a supply of coal for the schools. Mr. Nicholl's agreed to let the committee know, later when the district board would meet with it.
