Named Claude Newton as Coresponedtn-Case Tried Last May and Result Was a Disagreement of the Jury-It Was Agreed Not to Have a Second Jury Trial-Common Pleas Court.

A divorce was granted to Elmer H. Ridgeway yesterday from Mary H. Ridgeway. This is the sensational case which was tried before Judge Purdy in this county on May 21, 1902, and resulted in a disagreement of the jury.

The Ridgeways lived in Benton town ship from their marriage, April 20, 1887, until November 1, 1900, when they separated and Ridgeway began proceedings for a divorce on the ground of unfaithfulness, naming Claude Newton, one of his employes, as the co-respond-

The second trial of the case was set down for the week beginning Septem-ber 15, but an agreement was reached between the parties by which Mrs. Ridgeway withdrew her request for a jury trial and it was agreed that the case be heard as divorce cases usually are.

The attorneys on both sides, Everett Warren and C. Balentine for the libellant and Joseph O'Brien and R. H. Holgate for the respondent, agreed that the divorce proceedings should rest on the testimony of Mary Lamoreaux, William Skinnary, Mary Ridgeway and Claude Newton, taken at the trial of the case last May. Judge Edwards, after considering this evidence yesterday, granted Ridgeway a divorce

Continuous Laughter at the Dixie.

The funniest programme yet, was the verdict of the patrons of the Dixle thea-ter yesterday afternoon and evening. The bill, which was opened by Dan Harring-ton, who is undoubtedly the best in his line, was one that provoked almost continuous laughter. Murphy and Nichols, in "The Bifurcated Girl," introduced some of the most amusing bits of stage business that have been seen. Their breezy act closes with a very clever illu-sion, in which Miss Nichols appears to out herself in two, half of the body walk-ing off the stage, while the other remains suspended in the air. Dolan and Lenharr in their comedy; Burton and Brooks, Whistling Tom Brown, late of "The Trip to Chinatown"; Fred Hurd, the magician; Raymond and Kurkamp and Joseph West and Ida May Lewis, made up a galaxy of stare difficult to duplicate on a vaude ville stage.

Sam Devere's Company.

A combination of vaudeville and bur-esque is given by Sam Devere's Own company, which began a three days' en-gagement at the Star last night. The performance opens with a sketch by the New York comedy four, called "Toobles' Troubles." The three original madcaps do a fine dancing specialty and then comes the "only" Devere. If you're wise that's where you take to the timbers. Devere's the limit.

The Faust comedy trio do "The Haunt-ed Mill" an entertaining sketch. The Clissandas, eccentric musical comiques, give substantial assistance in the work production of an excellent drama. The play is peculiarly adapted to seenic en-vironments, and the curtain goes up in and dancers; the Marvelous Gregory, the world's greatest hop roller and club manipulator; the only Irene; Mr. John Clark, Illustrated singer; Harry Swenk, the phenomenal boy soprano, This afternoon Miss Myers will present "Two Orphans," and tonight, "The Stowaway."
