

Quality and Pattern

You look for the pattern most of the time when buying a shirt. So do we when placing our order with the manufacturer; it's quite an important item. But the problem of selecting quality is much more important with us. The undesirable pattern is known at a glance, but quality of fabric and color require minute examination with a powerful testing glass takes time, but there's lots of satisfaction for you in buying such shirts—satisfaction for us in selling such shirts. See the variety of patterns we show this season. You may rely on the quality as being the best for the money you pay us. Shirts made by the "Manhattan" Factory and $1, $1.50 and $2

Same Way with Hats

You know the shape that suits you. You also know whether you want a dark or light hat. But when it comes to quality you rely on your faith. It's this faith in our hat qualities that continues to increase

FOR THE TRIBUNE'S YOUNG PEOPLE

Puzzle Pictures to Be Discontinued, but Something Much More Interesting to Follow.

The Tribune has decided to discontinue the puzzle pictures which have been run daily for nearly two years, but does not intend to leave its young readers entirely unprovided for. Next Saturday will be announced a new feature which is sure to prove of the greatest interest to the children. Arrangements are not yet complete, so a definite announcement cannot be made this morning, but it will be something that will keep the little folks busy during the long evenings of the next two months. ## THEATRICAL.

The King Dramatic Company.

That well-known and popular repertoire organization, The King Dramatic com-pany, opened their annual engagement at the Academy of Music yesterday af-ternoon, with the presentation of "A Ward of France," a five-act play styled a romance of Louisiana. The leading roles are well taken care of by two very dever people. Frank Denithorne and Miss Helen Grayce, while the clever special-ties of the De Vaulis came in for a large share of the attention and applause.

Last evening they were greeted by another large audience, when they pre-sented that thrilling four-act play, "The Cherry Pickers." For this, some very claborate special scenery and electrical effects are used. This afternoon, the play will be "A Guilty Mother" and tonight, "Blue Jeans."

Startling Turn at the Dixie.

All doubts of the skeptleal as to the ability of Miss Brandon to accomplish the marvelous feat of looping the loop on a bicycle were removed at the Dixie theater yesterday afternoon, when the rider, after giving an exhibition of riding upon a "home trainer," easily went around the loop twice and came down upon the stage unharmed. As this is the first time the act has been attempted in public upon any stage, it naturally created much interest, and many ner-yous spectators turned away as the instant for the thrilling ride approached. The loop the loop performance was pre-ceeded by one of the best vaudeville bills that has yet been seen at the Dixie. Ex-cellent musical numbers were given by Marion Manola, who sang with old-time vigor, and Armour and Bagley, in the "Gypsy Maid"; Mr. and Mrs. Perkins Fisher delighted the audience in their quaint sketch entitled "The Half-Way House," and Fields and Wooley, German comedians, and Wood and Ray, all round laugh-makers, assisted in the humor of the programme. Probably the most successful laugh-raiser, however, is Jennie Yeamans, who is certainly the funniest woman ever seen on the Dixie stage. Her unique presentation of up-to-date slang and imita-tions provoked almost continuous laugh-ter during her act. The bill this week undoubtedly the best yet presented.

Imperial Burlesquers.

At the Star theater yesterday after-noon, Harry Williams' Imperial Burles-quers opened a three days' engagement before a large and much entertained audience. The show opens with "A Pair of Sports," a musical concoction in which all the members of the company appear gorgeously costumed.

After this comes the olio, in which
Ford and Dot West, sketch artists; Cliff
Gordon, German comedian; Etta Victoria, cortortionist; Randall and Perry, comedy sketch, and Adams and Kelly, Irish and German comedians, appear, "On Board the Yacht Imperial," another musical offering, is the closing feature of Jefferson de Angelis Tonight. Washington Irving's immortal conception in the long sleep of Rip Van Winkle is deftly involved in a piece of business in the first act of "The Emeraid Isle," the last opera by Sir Arthur Sullivan, which is to be seen here under the direction of Sam S. Shubert tonight at the Lyccum. One of the characters of the opera is that of a wayside charlatan, who roams about in search of a workless living, assisted by a bagful of paraphernalia, in which are beards and other disguises to further comic impersonations he gives when chance promises profit. This character is the opera is called Professor Bunn, the professorship being the fellow's own title to represent his past master-Washington Irving's immortal concepown title to represent his past master-ship of all forms of mimicry for highway and way-ide farthings. The professor circumstantially runs afoul in Ireland of a branch of the Clanina-Gaels, who mistake him for a spy. Bunn, a captive, sends an anonymous message to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, apprising him of the existence of the robels and naming their meeting place o' nights in the cayes of Carrig Cleena. This brings out the militia to squelch the malcontents. The tenantry, to circumvent the soldiery, conceive the idea of scaring the superstitious militia away with stories of awful goblins and fairles that haunt the Carrig Cleena caves. To lend color to these bugaboo yarns. Bunn's disguises and services are enlisted. One of the ceric beings who convince the red-coats that the fairy tales convince the red-coats that the fairy tales are all too true is an old grey-bearded shambling dotard, who comes to them with a welrd but delightfully humorous song of having accidentally strayed among the caves when a youth, to meet the chief fairy, one Cleena, whose sorcery spelled him into a slumber, from which he has but just awakened.
