New York, Nov. 5.—The hopes deferred of some of the large speculative holders of stocks made their influence felt in today's stock market. And the renewed disappointment of these hopes was reflected in the lively selling movement with which the market closed and before which prices receded from 1 to 1 per cent, below Monday's closing level. In the morning's spurt fractional advances were very general and reached a point or more in one or two prominent stocks. This buying was clearly based on the supposition that the stock market was to be revived. There has been a well defined assumption amongst a certain speculative class that the recent semi-stagnation in the market has been due to anxiety over the outcome of the elections. This class was made up mostly of the members of large speculative pools, which have constituted themselves the champions of various prominent stocks, of which they have taken on heavy lines with the intention of pushing their prices to a higher level and then selling out at a profit. The history of the recent stock market has been made up of the letting go of successive and then selling out at a profit. The history of the recent stock market has been made up of the letting go of successive parcels of these large holdings by the pools. The demonstrative buying at the opening this morning evidently came from these sources and was intended to signalize the supposed passage of the period of depression. The liquidation, however, that met the advances was of a character to discourage all efforts to put up prices and it was quickly demonstrated that the recent depression of the market was due to other causes than election uncertainties. The question of increasing labor cost, both in transportation and in manufacture, which has been brought up by the anthracite labor trouble, keeps attention closely fixed upon the problem of the culminating point of the period of prosperity. When the rise in prices reaches a stage at which consumption is checked, the culminating period of indu
