SCRANTON, NOVEMBER 19, 1902.

Recognizing the widespread interest taken all over the country in the testimony and argument before the Anthracite Strike commission, The Tribune proposes to print in convenient book form the reports appearing in its columns from day to day and to offer a limited edition of copies for sale at one dollar each. The volume will appear as soon as possible after the conclusion of the hearings and those interested may leave their orders now, We take for re-publication The Tribune reports instead of the full stenographic transcript, because that for ordinary purposes of popular reference would be too bulky. The daily reports in The Tribune miss nothing of essential interest and are the fullest and most accurate reports printed in any newspaper.

Not a Permanent Mistake.

T FREQUENTLY happens that tract with and confer freely with the representatives of one tradeunion while most emphatically declining to have anything to do with another union professing the same general policies. Is this to be accounted for on the basis of mere caprice or are there among modern labor unions fundamental differences irreconcilable by the men of keen judgment who administer the large business enterprises of the country?

The late Frank Thompson, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad company, once told the editor of the Philadelphia Ledger as that journal announces, that no well managed rallroad company could afford to employ a man who was not a member of the Locomotive Eugineers' and Firemen's unions, as their qualifications for membership were so exacting as to the character, sobriety and expert efficiency of the applicant as to render their members the best and most desirable of employes. That opinion, we believe, is now held generally by railway managers. A similar opinion obtains among certainly a majority of publishers with reference to the International Typographical union and most of the other organizations of workers in the printing trades. Many other unions have established it to a degree that employers doing business with them would be the first to regret their disappearance or decay. To say that there is any longer in this country a formidable repugnance or aversion among employers to collective bargaining over work and wages is, we believe, to misconceive the truth.

But it is the very fact that the unions we have mentioned strive more to upbuild character, sobriety and efficiency among their members and to win by these appealing means than to expand their jurisdiction and increase their authority by displays of force which is accountable, in our judgment, for the larger measure of their permanent success. A mistake often made in this country is to overvalue personal shrewdness and cunning or aggressive force and to undervalue the duller but safer "homely virtues" which have their origin in the moral law. But in the nature of things it is not a permanent mistake.

A little while ago it was Secretary Hitchcock whom the newspapers, or a part of them, were trying to rumor out of the cabinet; now it is Secretary Shaw, Next!

Men of Mr. Hughes' temperament cannot wait for the puble revelation of social abuses which counterpane of moral conventionalities. They have a mission and without their rusading and unaccommodating ardor ittle good could be done in this world and significantly less would be undertaken. Hugh Price Hughes was not what might be called an eloquent preacher. He had, indeed, little of the rhetorical range of a Spurgeon or a Henry Ward Beecher. He was far and away too absorbed a politician to be merely a theological interpreter of the Bible. He thought rightly that man's salvation will largely take care of itself if his moral and social individuality is in harmony with the nobler aspirations of his fellow men. Yet his religious life was as deep and vital as was his sociological enthusiasm. As a journalist Hugh Price Hughes was as conspicuous a success as in all other matters of consequence to which he put his hands. Some fifteen years ago, feeling dissatisfied with the religlous press of the denomination to which he belonged, he established the Methodist Times and made it a phenomenal success from the start. It has reached a weekly circulation of some two hundred thousand copies or more. He said unhampered, what he wished to say, in the forcible and informed style which was as strikingly individual as his own personal characteristics. He called things by their names. He had a mind of his own and he never hesitated to show it upon occasion. He may not have been always right, but if he had one trait above another it was sincerity. Such men make for human advance ment and their death is a loss to human

So far from this reassuring the average Englishman tha the German is his friend as well a kinsman, he has argued himself int the belief that Germany is awaiting for his commercial downfall, if not activel preparing to participate in it when th time has arrived for the dismember ment of his colonial empire. The English press generally, and particularl the National Review, has been busil and emphatically inculcating this apprehension. The kalser is well awar that the press in England cannot b muzzled, that its judgments, right o wrong, are the spontaneous expressio of the beliefs of its writers, and tha what it thinks today England believe

When the Briton examines his politi cal conscience, he asks himself why it is that Germany is making so many and great financial sacrifices to build a navy which shall equal, if not eclipse his own. Her colonial possessions are unimportant; her maritime commerce though steadily increasing, is relatively insignificant compared with his: her seaboard is shallow and narrow, her defensive barriers are on the hand and not on the sea. Surely the emperor is not building a great fleet to act as a supernumerary auxiliary to his magnificent army. The writers who propound this thesis are growing every day more numerous and dogmatic, and their prognostications the more credible. They point to the rapid development of the German fleet, the Weldlpolitk speeches of the emperor, and the growing consciousness of the German people that their future is upon the firm or corporation property, how held, Each merchant is obliged by law to keep at least three books, namely a book of inventories, day book and ledger. No crasures are permitted. The books must be balanced annually and show all obligations. They must also show exactly what money the merchant draws out for his private use. A penalty of not less than $50 or more than $500 is imposed for fullure to keep books in the manner prescribed. Merchants are also required to publish, through the press, the class of busi-ness, with its essential circumstances, etc.; to record in the public registry all documents concerning their business which the public is interested in; to keep strict and accurate accounts, and to pre-serve correspondence for ten years which affects their business. Persons who have been condemned for offenses against property, including forgery, embezzling and conspiracy, cannot engage in commerce. Business failures are rare, not exceed-

> By all accounts the wholesale attempt of the Trades Assembly of Schenectady to institute a reign of King Boycott in that town has proved abortive. The boycott thundered in Rheumatism, Rheumatic Gout and All Forms of Uric the index only to fall to pieces in the main text. The intelligent and conservative workingmen of Schenectady, of whom there are thousands, would not stand for it. A number of the unions have already called special meetings and disavowed all responsibility for or sympathy with it, and it is reported that the architects of it will soon pronounce its funeral oration. The incident is both instructive and inspiring. for it shows that the thinking men among organized labor are coming to the front again.

THE TRIBUNE'S SECOND ANNUAL

Junior Educational Contest.

A Contest in Word-Building.

Who Can Make the Most Words Out of the Letters in T-H-E H-O-M-E P-A-P-E-R

THIS IS much easier than last year's contest, and twenty of the brightest boys and girls will secure Christmas Gifts in cash for making the largest number of words out of these letters. It is lots of fun to think out the words and hunt them up in the dictionary, and besides it will help you with your spelling. You will be surprised at the number of different ways these twelve letters can be used.

Rules of the Contest. Presents will be given to the boys or girls, whose parents or guardians are subscribers to THE TRIBUNE, building the largest number of words out of the letters contained in "The Home Paper."

No letters must be used any more times than they appear in these three words. As an example, only one "A" could be used, but there might be two "H's" or three "E's."

Only words defined in the MAIN PORTION of "Webster's International Dictionary" (edition of 1898) will be allowed. Any dictionary can be used, but in judging the contest THE TRIBUNE will debar all words not found in Webster's.

Proper names, or any other words appearing in the "Appendix" will not be allowed. Obsolete words are admitted if defined in the dictionary. Words spelled two or more ways can be used but once. Words with two or more definitions can be used but once.

No single letters counted as words except "A" and "O." How to Write Your List.

Write on one side of the paper only. Write very plainly; if possible, use a typewriter.

Place the words alphabetically. Write your name, age, address and number of words at the top

Write the name of parent or guardian with whom you live and who is a renular subscriber to THE TRIBUNE. Fold the list-DO NOT ROLL.

CONTEST CLOSES SATURDAY, DECEMBER 20TH at 5 P, M

All letters of inquiry for information will be promptly answered. Address your list of words, or any question you wish answered, to
