IT IS THE CITY HALL IN PHILA-DELPHIA.

After Thirty-one Years of Work It Is Just Nearing Completion-Already Too Small for Its Uses-Curious Statistics About It and the Bronze Statue of William Penn on

from the New York Sun.

Along with the announcement that after thirty-one years of work the largest building in America is nearing completion comes another to the effect that the big pile is so overcrowded that its 4,500 tenants are beginning to call for the addition of another story. This despite the fact that the structure, Philadelphia's city hall, has 682 rooms with a total floor space of 118 acres.

If another story is ever added to the city hall it will be only one of hundreds of queer things that have become a part of the building's history. The leading queer thing to Philadelphia taxpayers, is how the city hall, even if it is the largest structure in the Western Hemisphere and he world's largest municipal building, the parliament building excepted, ever came to take

$25,000,000 from their pocketbooks. A recent report, in endeavoring to explain this expenditure, reveals some interesting facts. It states that $317,000 assistants in salaries since 1871, when the building was begun; $351,490 for paint and painting; $5,500,000 for 1.464,-000 cubic yards of marble for marbl work; $4,000,000 for fitting up rooms; $1,343,000 for watchmen and cleaners $736,000 for electric installation; and a installation of electricity furnished an interesting incident in the hall's history. When the walls were erected electric lighting was unheard of, but when its usefulness was demonstrated the now extinct public buildings commission ordered electric equip

The electricians had to chisel through in the stone walls for the wires at an expense of thousands of dollars, and it took them the better part of five years of steady work to wire the building. Now, however, the hall has a plant capable of furnishing all the light of city of 30,900 or 40,000 inhabitants could possibly use. The dynamo room is one of fifty-nin in the building's basement, which runs not only under the hall, but the plaza in the centre as well. These basement rooms teem with surprises. For one thing there is a sand bed filter with a daily capacity of 1,000,000 gallons of water, and the employes and thousands of strangers who daily tread the corridors, manage practically to consum this amount. Thousands of gallens are carried to their homes by the employes for the water furnished the Philadelphia householder is about the worst or earth and will be until the city gets its big filter beds in working order. In the Tower.

Like the lowest portion, the highest interesting and curious place. It contains the largest stone in the building, a block of granite weighing thirty tons It is 12 feet wide, 23 feet long and 18 inches thick.

The tower's walls are 22 feet thick. The second highest elevator in the world is the tower. It runs from the seventh floor, 138 feet above ground, to course of 372 feet 9 inches. The air cushions alone cost $25,000. One of the 400 telephones in the building is located in the tower, at the base of the statue Then there is the great clock and the little clock that governs it. Compressed air is the motive power.

The dials of the great clock are 361 feet above the earth, and the diameter of each is twenty-six feet. The long minute and hour hands are fifteen and twelve feet respectively and their weights 225 and 175 pounds. The weight of the dial frames, with giass, is five and one-half tons, and the total weight of the clock is fifty tons.

The little or master clock, the clock that really runs, is 143 feet below the great clock by which the city and country folks for miles around regulate their watches. Two years were spenin building it, and its mechanism is as delicate as that of the finest watch. It rests in a metallic case on a platform built into a wall so no vibration can affect it. Quite unlike the big elock, which in four years collected three tons of dirt, the case keeps it free from dust. Once every minute this clock, which is regulated from Washington, open; the valve which admits compressed air to the tubes connected with the gears The air moves the hands of the clock up in the tower, which, after all, is just a dummy clock, for it has only four faces and lets the little clock down below do all the actual work.

Another peculiar thing about the wer is that in the course of a day's entraction and expansion, due to the in's rays, make it lean three-quarrs of an inch out of plumb. culiarity has been determined ans of a tub of molasses placed far in the tower, the surface of the lasses varying three-quarters of an n, according to the lean of the

Between tower and basement are many queer things. The largest room measures 57x71 feet and has a floor area of 4,118 square feet. This is the common Council chamber, and two three-story houses, Philadelphia style, could easily be placed in it.

Thirteen of the rooms occupied by the City Solicitor's department are furnished in steel. The only things inflammable in them are the wooden tops of a few tables and a half-dozen

Desks are of steel as well as doors, window frames and thousands of fireproof boxes for municipal documents. Four hundred and seventy-seven tons of steel were used in fitting up these rooms, and it took seventeen months to do the work.

Another room entirely of steel, except the table tops, is the Law Association Library, where 38,000 volumes are kept. This library, the second largest of the kind in America, has among its many other treasures one of the two existing sets of transcripts of complete records of the United States Supreme

The seating capacity of the seventeen court rooms is about 8,500. In addition to these $.500 chairs, 5,000 chairs are scattered among the various offices. Every room has a clock, and each room contains on an average three roll-top desks, making about 2,000 of these in use in the building.

Two chandeliers cost $4,800 each. They are gold plated. They hang in what are known as the conversation rooms has been paid to the architect and his in decorating which tens of thousands of dollars have been spent. These rooms are really reception rooms for the use of the mayor and councils.

Other Features.

The biggest stone column is 24 1-2 feet high and two feet eight inches in diameter. It weighs fourteen tons and is of one piece. It and nearly all the stone used in the building came from a single quarry in Massachusetts.

There are nearly three miles of main corridors and one-half that distance of branches.

The five guides declare that, on an average, 600 persons, who have no object in view other than that of sightseeing, are daily shown through the building. This makes a total of 150,000 yearly. Bridal countes are in evidence by thousands. When the courts are in session the corridors are so blockaded that one can scarcely push his way through. Twenty-two persons have met death while working on the city hall. All have been killed by falls. One man recently fell from the brim of Penn's Another was killed by a fall of twelve feet.

Andrew Mack Friday Night.

That distinguished Irish comedian, Andrew Mack, will be at the Lyceum Friday night in his new play by Theodore Burt Sayre, the talented young author, who, by the way, wrote his great success, "Tom Moore." The new comedy is of a military nature, although there is no fighting in it at all, excepting in a verbal sense, it is entitled "The Soger Boy."

Mr. Mack will impersonate a young American military officer and it should fit him to a nicety. He is a remarkably talented player, every new play being of a higher order. Seats on sale this morning at o'clock.

"San Toy."

Hobart Smock, who is to sing the tenor role in "San Toy," the Chinese-English musical play which is to be seen here again at the Lyceum Saturday matinee and night, with the same great cast as last season, is a nephew of the late Vice President Hobart, after whom he was named. He had also sung in oratorio and concert and had a large class of pupils, all of which he has given up for a stage career.

Mr. Smock is of commanding figure and possesses a robust tenor voice, which is heard to excellent advantage as Captain "Bobby" Preston, the young English army officer who falls in love with "San Toy" and rescues her from the emperor's palace. The number in which Mr. Smock is heard to the best advantage is the interpolated one of "Tommy Atkins." Seats on sale Christmas morning at o'clock.
