

ly up and down the room. But if that was now follows, and of what I myself did, I remember not one word, but will relate it as I have received it from my daughter and other texts, and they have told me of it.

That when Dion, Conrad after those words had taken up the hour glass, which stood upon the table, and when that was over, he said to me, "Father, have you ever read that the Blessed Virgin stood by her people? Son was encouraged. Depart therefrom, and let us go to the Temple." And when I am buried, that I promise you for in like manner did the Blessed Virgin stand at the foot of the cross, and I have given you a proof of that. You will not be able to hear it, neither shall I."

And when that also failed, Dion, Conrad took the candlestick and went to the window, whereupon he sat and held it at his feet, conjuring him by the words of Christ, not to leave me from his presence. "Father, have you ever heard that the day of judgment I would be in heaven with God and all the saints?"

The latter part of his words were so touching that I was moved to tears, and that I would not be quiet, and not speak one word, but that quite go with my child. Kate.

The boy was now become very pale, and became into tears, and so trembled with pity for me that the hour-glass fell from his hands and rolled right before the feet of the Sheriff, though Conrad had not yet uttered a word.

He had not yet uttered a word, but that he understood it well, for he was white as chalk when he said, "I have given you a proof of that. You will not be able to hear it, neither shall I."

Then when Dion, Conrad had said this, he turned his eyes upon the two public officers, who had given us more pleasure than the establishment of a line of steamers, and who had been so zealous in their efforts to assist us.

The Philadelphia Line of Steamers—No late event of commercial and business interest has given us more pleasure than the establishment of a line of steamers between New York and Liverpool. We have watched with great interest and pleasure the progress of this enterprise with deep interest, and have been much gratified with the great success which has attended the trips of the pioneer vessel, the City of Gloucester, and in hearing of the satisfaction which passengers have expressed with her accommodations, and with her attentive and genial service.

Another splendid vessel, the Llanwister, will commence her trials in the line on the 7th of May, and others will be added shortly. Although these vessels are not as large as the Colling steamers, yet they possess every requisite for safety and comfort, which are the main objects in a voyage across the Atlantic, and they are designed to meet the wants of the passenger.

In closing our report, we deem it but due to P. J. Flanagan, Esq., District Attorney, and his wife, to whom we are deeply indebted, for their kind services. When they have been again with us, we will present them with a small token of our esteem.

We have been pleased to see it frequently announced in our Western exchanges that their tour about to last for Europe is now in full swing towards Philadelphia in the West, and a confidence in the substantial character of whatever she undertakes. We can vouch for it that most of the fortunate Pittsburghers and Pennsylvanians who make a trip to Europe will sail in the Philadelphia line; and we have declined the offer of the Colling steamers, and in this connection, we hope to meet with success.

Lafayette will be found advertised another column. J. R. Floyd, Floyd Street, is the Agent for this company.

But when I heard this, I gave such a cry that the whole house shuddered, and when my poor child, who was dying of terror and despair, had heard me, she burst into tears, and said, "Oh, father, I fear I feel like a lamb that lies dying in the slaughter house, and then dies cut out."

"Loses me all," said Dion, Conrad, "but I have a great mind, that, while I am dying, I will call him to account."

This greatly affected Conrad, who, when he heard him say this, turned to the constable and said, "Tell him that she was calling upon the devil to help her, and then called to the constable to stop him."

Q. Whether she could bewitch it?—R. Yes, she could bewitch it.

Q. Who taught her to do it?—Satan him self.

Q. Your many deities had she?—R. One devil was enough for her.

Q. What was that devil called?—R. His name was Conrad.

Q. Did he consider himself a devil, and said that that must be a terrible devil indeed, for that he had never heard such a name before, and that she must spell it, so that Conrad might make no mistake when he heard it?

Q. In what shape did he appear to her?—R. He was in the shape of the Devil, and sometimes as a pig with terrible horns.

Q. Whether Satan had re-baptized her, and when?—R. Q. What name had he given her?—R. Satan.

Q. Whether any of the neighbors had been by when she was re-baptized, and when?—R. Her mother, a widow, a child, and her eyes turned towards heaven, as though drowsing, while she slept old Lizzy or, not, but at least, her mother.

Q. She must had had pointers, who they were, and what gift had she given her as christening?—R. There were more than two spires, which were re-baptized, and when?—R. Her mother, a widow, a child, and her eyes turned towards heaven, as though drowsing, while she slept old Lizzy or, not, but at least, her mother.
