PITTSBURGH GAZETTE.

VARIETIES.

The observance of humility, even towards an enemy, is inculcated by a Hindoo fastidious, with great elegance. "Be modest too, before its fragrance eyes to the aid that bears it."

Sydney Smith said there were three things which every man fancied he could do—farm a small property, drive a gig, and edit a newspaper.

Voltaire's definition of a physician is: "An unfortunate gentleman, compelled every day to perform miracles, namely, to reconcile health with intemperance."

If every eye, says Dryden, can be made the instrument of happiness, he is a wise man who does not despise it.

When Louis II fainted very much on losing a changing his creed, he replied—

"Please your Majesty, I am pre-engaged."

"How?"

"When last in Egypt, I promised the Pasha if ever I changed my religion to become a Mahometan."

Champion said of the ancient Government of France: "It is a monarchy tempered by songs."

When the rich miser Rizzo, who left about a million of money to be divided between his two sons, was advised to give them some instructions, was content to say: "Putting things into people's heads, or taking money out of their pockets."

Our greatest glory consists not in never falling, but in rising every time we fall.

Madame de Deffand said of Mlle. de Lespinasse exceedingly, "She was the most amiable creature in the world; but I trouble myself very little about the degree of affection she has for me. I should be sorry to lose her, because I feel that I manage and perpetuate my pleasure, by employing my care to perpetuate her existence."

Dr. Parr, when a boy at Harrow, had so very old a face for his age, that one day his schoolmistress, Sir William Jones, said looking at him, "Parr, if you go on as you do, you will be at least forty years, you may stand a chance of exerting your face."

Talleyrand, speaking of a well known lady, said pathetically, "She is inconsolable!" Then, as if recanting, he added, "But that is her only fault."

Sidney Smith being annoyed one evening, by the familiarity of a young gentleman who thought a new acquaintance, was encouraged by the canon's jocular reputation to address him by his surname alone, and hearing him call that he must go this evening, to visit for the first time the archbishop of Canterbury, the reverend gentleman pathetically said, "Pray don't clap him on the back and call him Hoskey."

Southey said one of his retired friend: "Translate Tristram Shandy into Hebrew, and you will be a happy man."

"Jessie, my lad, keep away from the gate. Can you see one coming, dodger? Just such a critter, as that young 'un cleanin' the door-step on t'other side of the street. Could ye poor old Jemmy? Don't look yer eye wear that way and wink. If it hadn't been for her, you and yer dad might ha' been in Californiay bundin' dimpsey my son."

Gold in South Carolina.—A piece of gold about the size and shape of a man's look, was found, at Yorkville district, S. C., a few days ago. It is worth about $2000. At the Gopher where this piece was found, twenty one and a half pounds of gold have been collected by three persons during the last six months.

There was a fire at Ottawa, Illinois, on the 26th ult., that entirely destroyed the Catholic church and the parsonage of the Rev. O'Donnel. Loss between $5,000 and $6,000. The fire originated from a furnace of charcoal left on the floor of the church where a mechanic had been using it to repair the spouting.

Great minds find it more difficult to decide than to become great. It is with genius as with gin, after imbibing a certain quantity, the holder finds it much easier to run than to walk. A first class poet will get you up an ode in an hour. Ask him to write a poet for a tin-shop, however, and he would sweat over it a whole day.

As the sun doth not swear you off and then continue to be pleased to rise day by day immediately after each and is received with universal welcome, neither should you wait for applause and shout, and praise, in order to be good, but be a voluntary benefactor, and you will be beloved like the sun.

Things which belong to the category be doubled, tripled and quadrupled in existence, as the mirrors. Things which seem, that is, which should be also doubled, but which exist the least in existence, is conceded—there is no limit to a dozen of hot one object.

A Yankee Peddler, with his cart, overtaking another of his class on the road, was addressed—

"Hallow, what do you carry?"

"Things and medicines," was the reply.

"Good," exclaimed the other, "you can go ahead, I carry grave stones."

THE SIGN OF THE DAY.—Trade is the greatest evil of the present day; excess in business, in pleasure, in every pursuit. It is a serious evil attendant upon our extensive commerce and increasing wealth, the whole time is to be spared by it. Man rises in a continual hurry of business, which leaves him neither a moment of leisure, nor a disposition to employ it profitably. By a natural effect, excess in business disposes the mind to excess in amusement, and that worldly mindedness prevails to such a degree as to be utterly subversive of the Christian's life. "We toil on from pursuits and frivolous occupations of the world," says an elegant writer, "till we die in, our harness and then expect that gigantic crime stands in the way, to step immediately into the Kingdom of Heaven; but this is impossible, for, without a previous detachment from the business of this world, we are totally unprepared for the happiness of another." What shall it profit a man, if he gains the whole world and lose his own soul; or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?

We have felt, when looking above us into that atmosphere, that there was an infinity of space, which, we could not explain. When I look into man's spirit, and see there the germ of an immortal life, I feel more deeply that an infinity lies hid beyond what I see; for this idea of duty, which springs in its inmost heart, is discern a law more sacred and boundless than gravition, which binds the soul to a more glorious universe than that to which attraction binds the body; and which is to endure, though the laws of physical nature pass away. Every noble sentiment, every intellectual vision, is to me a witness, a prophetic sign of spiritual power to expand for ever, just as faint ray from a distant sun is significant of unimaginable splendor.—Channing.

Freight received for all the Way Stations on the Pennsylvania Central Railroad.

Alum Rock	1 bbl
Allegheny	1 bbl
Bellevue	1 bbl
Blairsville	2 bbls
Brownsville	2 bbls
Connellsville	2 bbls
Cannonsburg	1 bbl
Carnegie's	1 bbl
Coulter's	1 bbl
Dunlap's Creek	1 bbl
Elizabeth	1 bbl
Freeport	1 bbl
Greensburg	1 bbl
Hickory	1 bbl
Hollidaysburg	1 bbl
Harrisburg	1 bbl
Johnstown	1 bbl
Kittanning	1 bbl
Lancaster	1 bbl
Lewistown	1 bbl
Lewisburg	1 bbl
Lock Haven	1 bbl
Lemont	1 bbl
Mifflin	1 bbl
Middletown	1 bbl
Mount Pleasant	1 bbl
Mount Union	1 bbl
Mechanicsburg	1 bbl
Manor Hill	1 bbl
Millerstown	1 bbl
Mill Creek	1 bbl
Newport	1 bbl
Perryville	1 bbl
Port Royal	1 bbl
Pittsburgh	1 bbl
Pittsburgh	1 bbl
Pittsburgh