a small majority. This result has originated from various causes. The cafetessuess and indifference of Whig voters we think will be found the principal reason; another is the large vote precised by Barker, which came chiefly from persons who usually vote with the Whigs; and another reason is, that many Whigs alarmed at the reports that Rarker stood some chance, and being induced to believe that Guthrie was a stronger candidate than Sawyer, threw their votes for him to defeat Barker. We regret the result in all presents that the support of the Whigs who hid nominated him, and who have a handsome majority in this Gity.

There is some consolation, however to be drawn from this defeat. Barker has several hugger to the total apount of species exported last year, and falls greatly shelind his completiors. Although we feel morthing that he could have received as many votes as he did, yet we rejoice that the strange infatuation which has possessed a portion of our population in regard to that person is dying out:

At Cothvia her made a good officer, and no was a small part of the gross exports of the year amounting to the gross of whigh other strange infatuation which has possessed a portion.

The another reason is that the support of the whigs who hid nominated him, and who have a handsome the British cord law was in full force.

The total apount of specie exported last year, and falls greatly she hid his completiors. Although we feel morthing that the experiment which has possessed a portion of our population in regard to that person is dying out:

There were twenty five or thirty regular tonsts which were expressive of the feelings of this powerful democratic organization towards the distinguished persons in whose honor they were proposed. These compliments embracednearly all of that large division of Democratic array who aspire to the Presidency. Only three of them, however, were present to respond to the tonsta, Scantors, Cass and Douglass, and Genaral Joseph Lane. Gen. Houston had been present but was compelled to retire on account of ith health, early in the evening. It was really amainst to see the candidates go it. Cass and Houglas made set speeches, and were both applicated to the tables on the old gentleman, as Gen. Chas got the advantage of him the night before. Gen. Cass was pleasant, animated, and agreeable, tickling the fancy of the boys and reviving the traditional which hangs around old Hickory's name. But the Little Illiaoisan made the prints. boldness and enterprise in the leaders, such decidity and obedience in the masses. The movements having been agreed upon and the order given, it is beautiful to see them deplay into line, advance, retreat, lie low for an opportunity to strike to advantage.

It is well enough to direct the attention of Pennsylvania voters to the fact that one of the toasts was a panegyric upon Ex-Vice President Olalas for giving the casting vote that destreyed the tariff of 1842.
