PITTSBURGH GAZETTE.

FRANK'S TRADE WITH A YANKEE.—"The last time I was in St. Louis," says Dan Marble, "I was sitting in the store of old Frank——, country fashion, on top of the counter, legs pendent, when a real nutmeg came booming along, and in he comes with a heap of bundles in his fists. Frank was down on pedlars, and Yankees in particular, but he was always 'set' for a joke, and loved equal to an Israelite to drive a sharp bargain.

The Yankee nodded to me, and I nodded to wards Frank, intimating—there was his victim. Frank was busy smoking and figuring over his ledger.

"How'd du," observed the pedlar.

"No, no, no—go on," Frank peevishly responded; but that wasn't the Yankee's religion, he wanted to trade and was bound to do it.

"Kalkilate, Squire, I couldn't drive a trade or nothin' with you folks to-day."

"I calculate you can calculate about right, for you cannot," was the sneering reply.

"Well, I guess you needn't get huffy about it. Now here's a dozen jenuine razor strops, ten dollars and a half; you may have 'em for ten dollars."

"I tell you I don't want any of your trash, so you had better be going," says Frank.

"Sho, how you talk; I'll bet you five dollars if you make me an offer for them ere strops, we'll have a trade yet."

"Done," says Frank, puting a V into my hand as he spoke.

The Yankee deposited a like sum—when Frank offered him a picayune for the strops.

"There your'n," said the Yankee, as he quietly fobbed the stakes. "But," he added, with great apparent honesty, "I kalkilate a joke in a joke, and you don't want them strops, I'll trade back!"

Frank's countenance brightened.

"There it is," said the Yankee, as he received the strops, and passed over the picayune.—"A trade's a trade—and now you're wide awake in airnest, I guess the next time you trade with that ere pic, you'll do better than to buy razor strops.

Away walked the pedlar with his strops and his wager, amid the shouts of half a dozen fellows who dropt in.

A History of Pittsburgh.

BY NEVILLE B. CRAIG, Esq.—A History of Pittsburgh, from the earliest period to the present time, in which the author has given to the public, in the shape of the last century, with notices of the first establishment of some of the important manufactories and the rise of the present mill improvement, up to the present time; to which is added a chapter upon the advantages of our position for manufacturing and commercial pursuits, with a summary of the progress and statistics of Pittsburgh, and a brief history upon our rivers, canals, and slackwater improvements.

There is no point in this State where so many important events and distinguished characters have been compressed within so brief a period of time, as in the county around the head of the Ohio. To collect together and exhibit in historical order these various incidents, and to proclaim the advantages of our position, as inducements for capitalists to settle here, is the object of the present work.
