of 1846, based all his arguments upon the assumption that an increased importation of foreign fabrics would lead to a corresponding increase of exports of American breadstuffs, and as a set of the s try sum of eight millions! Is it not time that of our prosperity.

Two alternatives are before us. either return to the policy of protection, or crush down the wages of labor of all kinds to a point which will enable this country to compete with Europe in the products of mechanical and manpfacturing industry, and thus entail poverty and on unon vast numbers of our people. Can any true American hesitate for a moment as to which he will choose?" In fact, the process of depression of the reward of labor is now and will go on until we reach the going on, and will go on until we reach the standard of Europe, unless we arrest it by returning to the policy of protection.

To arrest this downward tendency will not require much increase of the tariff. What we need is steadiness in the rates of duties, and security against the frauds of false invoices, which give to the foreign importor great advantages over his American rival. These can conly be secured by the adoption of specific du-ties in all practicable cases; and it is the opin-
