Copley's Pot Clay.
THE subscribers have always on hand a supply of Pot Clay, manufactured by Joseph Copley, Esq., and used principally for making glass pots, and of established reputation, being carefully prepared and put up in barrels. Proportioning the "mix"—two thirds Copley's clay, and one third raw American clay; or, one third Copley's clay, one third ground pots, and one third raw clay—will give double the pressure more and better shells than those made exclusively of German clay.
