PITTSBURGH GAZETTE

THERE'S NAE ROOM FOR TWA.

It was in simmer time o' year,
An' simmer leaves were rhewn:
When I and Kitty walked abreid,
An' Jamie walked atween.

We reached the brig o' yon wee linn,
Our bonny brig nae ama';
"Jenny," said Jem, "mann walk behin."
"There's nae room for twa."

"There's nae room for twa," said he,
"There's nae room for twa."
O, Jamie's words went to my heart,
They're a' my care for twa."

A weel a day my heart leaped high
When walkin' by his side;
His thoughts, alas! are idle now,
For K tty is his bride.
He cou'd na', an' he wud hae baith,
For that's forbid by law:
In wedded life, an' wedded love,
There's nae room for twa.

There's nae room for twa, ye ken,
There's nae room for twa:
So! I hae gang'd my gate alane,
There's nae room for twa.

The creepin' years hae slowly pass'd,
As' I hae struggled strang,
Wi' a broken hope an' a broken heart,
But it is nae now or long:
My thread o' life is na' but span,
An' I mann gang awa',
An' mouider in the clay cauld ground,
Where's nae room for twa.

There's nae room for twa, ye ken,
There's nae room for twa,
There's nae room for twa;
There's nae room for twa, ye ken,
There's nae room for twa.
The heart that's sae's to God and Heaven
Has nae room for twa.

TREATMENT OF PERSONS STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.—In a communication to the Portland Advertiser, Dr. Davies of that city says the popular impression in relation to the application of cold water to persons struck by lightning, is a decided error. The Doctor observes; "The whole treatment necessary to counteract the injurious effects of lightning may be comprised in a few words. Expose the body to a moderate warmth, so as to prevent the loss of animal heat, and inflate the lungs so as to imitate natural respiration as much as possible, when the person breathes with difficulty, or when he has ceased altogether by his own efforts. The sprinkling of cold water over the face, in order to excite respiration by reflex action, may also be tried

THE MISSIONARY HYMN.—A writer in the New York Independent has made the following interesting statement:

"A gentleman gave a description of the original manuscript of the Missionary Hymn, which he had seen; in Bishop Heber's hand-writing, in the possession of Dr. Raffles, of Liverpool. The story of its origin is, that just before his embarkation for India, Bishop Heber was engaged to preach a missionary sermon, when the minister of the place told him the choir had no suitable hymn to sing, and begged the Bishop to write one for them. He sat down at once and wrote this glorious hymn, of which the first draft is so perfect that there is only one alteration of a word. The line that now reads—

'The heathen in his blindness,' first stood—

'The pagan in his blindness.'

How many thousand missionary meetings have been enlivened and elevated and incited to new zeal and hope, by singing this hymn!"

Barry's Tricopherous.

Why is Barry's Tricopherous so popular?—The reason is obvious—because it is the best preparation of its kind ever offered at one half or one fourth the price of their competitors for public favor. People will not give a dollar for a bottle of liquid for the hair, when they can get a better article for twenty five cents.

As an article of beautifying, elevating, thickening, fastening, and curing the hair, Barry's Tricopherous, sold at 25 cents a bottle, is unequaled in comparison with any compo-sition for the same purpose that European or American ingenuity has yet given to the world.
