and treated such classificated form and with the theoretical control in the property of the policy o

The President's duty is to see that the laws are "faithfully executed"—not to make them, nor dictate them to Congress. The exertion of the President's influence to secure the passage of a law, is one of the puricious Locofcop practices which Whigs have lawariably denounced. We protest against its introduction into our party, and we can see nothing sise in the domand of a "guaranty for the future" but an attempt to extract from the Whig candidate ante-election extract from the Whig candidate anti-election veto pledges, and promises to exert whatever influence he may have as Precident to control the legislation of Congress. To demand them is an issuit to the candidate; po practice them would be in violation of whig doctrine, as taught from the beginning, and to insist upon them in support of certain opinious which the individual himself is understood to entertain, and when they are pretty certain to do more harm than good, is a degree of unreasonableness almost amounting to folly.

Our next extract is from the concluding re-marks of Dr. Barnes, on the same Epistle. The President's duty is to see that the laws or "faithfully executed"—not of make them, nor dictate them to Congress. The exertion of law, is one of the particular seasons of the particular the president's influence to secure the parage of a law, is one of the particular seasons of the particular than the president of a law, is one of the particular than the president of a law, is one of the particular than the president of a law, is one of the particular than the president of a law, is one of the particular than the president of a law, is one of the particular than the president of a law, is one of the particular than the president of a law, is one of the particular than the president of the friends and advocates of slavery as further than the president of a law, is one of the particular than the particular than the party influence of the party —those who have a mane that is known, all these are of the party—those who have a mane that is known, all these are the party—those who have a mane that is known, all these are the party—those who have a mane that is known, all these are the party—those who have a mane that is known, all these a said, and Mr. Franklin Telesco or end that Shakespear tells the contract of the party—those who have a mane that is known, all these are particular to the party—those who have a mane that is known, all these are particular to the party—those who have a president of the party—those who have a mane that is known, all these are particular than the party is the the party

From the Baltimore Patriot.

The Convention has consummated its work by nominating Frankin Pierce, of New Hampshire, as the Democratic Candidate for President.

We may safely imagine that we hear a thousand wolces asking "Who is Frankin Pierce?" The question is easily answered but who will be satisfied with the answer?

Mr. Pierce belongs to New Hampshire, and has been in Congress—but what he has said, what he has done, how, in any way, he has distinguished himself, that he should be selected as a proper man to make President of the United States, no one can explain—except it be to ndimit that party did i!

So we go, the great men of the party—those who have a name that is known, all these and est aside, and Mr. Frankin Pierce overshadows them all! How true is all that Shakerpear tells us. He had this act of the Convention in mind when he wrote: lor an its other anticipated intonences, we should labor and pray that the gospel may be diffused as speedily as possible all over the world; that it may raise man everywhere from his degradation, and invest every human being with the dignity of a freeman; that it 'may undo the heary burden, break every yoke, and bid the oppressed go free.'
