Napoleon on the Battle Field.

The night after the battle of Bassano, the moon rose cloudless and brilliant over the sanguinary scene. Napoleon, who seldom exhibited any hilarity or even satisfaction of spirits in the hour of victory, rode, as was his custom, over the plain, sad, silent and thoughtful, seemed lost in painful reverie. It was midnight. The confusion and the uproar had passed away, and the deep silence of the calm starlight night was only disturbed by the moans of the wounded and the dying. Suddenly a dog sprang from beneath the cloak of his dead master, and rushed to Napoleon, as if frantically imploring his aid, and, then rushed back again to the mangled corpse, licking the blood from the face and the hands, and howling most piteously. Napoleon was deeply moved by the affecting scene, and involuntarily checked his horse to contemplate it. In relating the event many years afterwald, he remarked, "I know not how it was, but no incident upon any field of battle ever produced such an impression on my feelings. This man, thought I, must have had among his comrades, friends, and yet here he lies, forsaken by all except his faithful dog. What a strange being is man! How mysterious are his expressions! I had without emotion ordered battles which had decided the fate of armies. And yet here my sympathies were most deeply and resistlessly moved by the mournful howling of a dog. Certainly in that moment I should have been unable to refuse any request to a supplicant enemy."

HONOR.—What is honor but the height and flower and top of morality, and the utmost refinement of invergration? Virtue and honor are such inseparable companions that the heathen would admit no man into the temple of honor who did not pass into it through the temple of virtue. Princes, indeed, may prefer honor, or rather titles and names of honor, but they are man's or woman's own actions which must make him or her truly honorable. And every man's life is the herald's office whence he must derive and fetch that which must blazon him to the world; honor being but the reflection of a man's own actions shining bright in the face of all about him, and from thence rebounding on himself. Seldom is a man apt to revenge a contumelious or a reproachful word, but to be above it; and, therefore, it was greatly spoken by Caius Marius—he said he valued not what men could say of him; for, if they spoke true, they must needs speak honorably of him; if otherwise, his life and manners should be their confutation. And doubtless it is a truer and nobler vindication of a man's honor to clear off and confute a slander by his own life than by another man's death—to make it innocence and his virtue his compurgators, and not to fight, but to live down the calumniator.

AN APT FIGURE.—An Indian chief, during the early settlement of New England, invited a minister to settle as a missionary among his tribe, and to induce him to do so, the Sagamore said, "You shall be to us as we do stands by a running water, filling many vessels."

We have never met, out of Holy Writ, a more beautiful figure than this. Indeed it seems to have a resemblance to the simple aptness of the old Hebrew poetry, and to express, by a chaste and delightful comparison, the true nature of the office of an Evangelist. It is not his wisdom that he presents, or his own fulness that he puts forward; He brings forth from the inexhaustible supply which Revelation furnishes, "living water" for all who thirst, after righteousness. He himself is but the minister, the servant. He rests not on his own sufficiency, but upon the sufficiency of Christ. He draws not from his own fountain, but from that which has been opened for every transgression. He speaks for his own name, but in that of his Divine Master. "Pray for us, that the word of God may have free course and be glorified."—N. Y. Observer.

ANECDOTE OF DR. CHALMERS.—There was a little old woman in the city of Glasgow, who much admired Dr. Chalmers, and usually attended all his sermons, on Sunday and week days, whether they were doctrinal or practical, theological or ethical, homiletic or hortatory. During the time he was in great perplexity. Dr. Chalmers had dealt much on a moral lever, with which he wished to uplift human nature. What a moral lever! was the little old woman could not divine. A friend took the poker and placed it on the bars of the grate, trying to raise the idea, and make the imagery palpable. The little old woman paused, nursed, and at last the fire burned. She bethought of the palpinity to the pulpit, the subject, the doctor, and herself, by such a materialization of the moral. It "came," and bursting with indignation, she said, "Do you mean to tell me that Dr. Chalmers would preach a hale hour about a poker."

THINK.—Thought engenders thought. Place one idea upon paper, another will follow it, and still another spirit you have written a page. You cannot fathom your mind. There is a well of thought there which has no bottom; the more you draw from it, the more clear and fruitful it will be. If you neglect to think yourself, and use other people's thoughts, giving their utterance only, you will never know what you are capable of. At first your ideas may come in lumps—homely and shapeless; but no matter—time and perseverance will arrange and refine them. Learn to think, and you will learn to write—the more you think, the better you express your ideas.

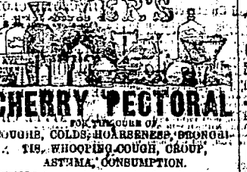
MEDICAL.



CHERRY PECTORAL

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, CONSUMPTION.

THIS invaluable remedy, for all diseases of the Throat and Lungs, has established a celebrity from its remarkable cures, never equalled by any other medicine before. Other preparations have shown some cures sufficient, and sometimes effected notable cures, but none have ever so fully won the confidence of every community where it is known. After years of trial, in every climate, the results have undisputably shown it to possess a mastery over this dangerous class of diseases which could not fail to attract the attention of Physicians, Patients, and the public at large.

For the statement, not of obscure individuals, and from far distant places, but of those who are known and respected throughout the country.

The widely celebrated Surgeon, Doctor VALENTINE MOTT, of New York city, says:

"It gives me pleasure to testify the value and efficacy of Ayer's CHERRY PECTORAL, which I consider peculiarly adapted to cure diseases of the throat and chest."

DR. PERRINE, the venerable President of the Vermont Medical College, one of the eminently learned physicians of this country, writes: "Ayer's CHERRY PECTORAL is extensively used in this section, where it has shown unquestionable virtue in the treatment of pulmonary diseases."

The Rev. JOHN D. CHOCRANE, a distinguished Clergyman of the English Church, writes to the conductor of the public improvements, saw in operation, in and around the city, a daily exhibition of unusual interest. Capitalists and others will find it to their advantage to call at the office of the subscriber, and obtain information in relation to the above property.

Hear the Patient.

DR. J. C. AYER, Lowell, is travelling under old gations to you for the restoration of my health, and in a report of my case, I only do my duty to the afflicted when I say that your CHERRY PECTORAL has done for me what no other medicine could accomplish. I took a bad cold, accompanied by a severe cough, which settled on my lungs, and finally ripened into consumption. I grew worse, in spite of the best medical skill in this city, until I was reduced so low that my friends thought I could not live a week. In this condition I was induced to try your CHERRY PECTORAL, and, contrary to my expectations, it relieved me immediately, and in a few days I was able to sit up in my chair. Before I had taken the first bottle I was able to walk about the house, and by the use of four bottles I was restored to perfect health, and am to-day as well as I ever was in my life.

I will say to all that are afflicted with any disease approaching consumption, that they will be doing wrong if they do not give Cherry PECTORAL a fair trial.

C. S. STONE, A.M.,
Principal of the Literary Institution,
Pittsford, Monroe County, N. Y.

DEAR SIR:—I with myself to add that another wife of mine had been given up by her physicians to die with consumption, and was actually dying, when I procured a bottle of your CHERRY PECTORAL. She commenced taking it, and before she had finished the first bottle she was decidedly better. She has now taken three bottles, and is entirely restored to health, and is able to do the work for a family of five persons. I have given your medicine to others with the most astonishing results, and I feel confident that it will cure any case of consumption that is not beyond the reach of medicine.

Yours, with respect,
JULIA LEAN.

I hereby certify that the above statements are true, as I am personally known to the parties, and have seen the effects of the medicine.

IMPORTANT TO THOSE AFFLICTED WITH DISEASES OF THE LUNGS AND BREAST.

We call attention to the following evidence of unquestioning heart in restorative virtues.

TOWN POINT, Lake co., Indiana, March 6th, 1851.

DEAR SIR:—I feel it my duty to inform you of the good effects I have received from your CHERRY PECTORAL. I was taken with a severe cold, which settled on my lungs, and I was confined to my bed for six weeks. I was attended by several of the best physicians in this section, but they pronounced my disease consumption, and said I could not live. I had taken a number of bottles of Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, which relieved me to such an extent that I was induced to try your CHERRY PECTORAL. I had taken but one bottle when I found relief, and by the time I had taken three bottles I was entirely restored to health, and have been so ever since. I was confined to my bed for six weeks.
