ATROCIOUS HIGHWAY ROBBERY.—A very singular highway robbery took place in the Ninth Ward on Wednesday night. Alphonse Rinne, a Frenchman who has but recently arrived in this city, and was stopping at a hotel in the Fifth Ward, was taking a walk about ten o'clock in the vicinity of the outer depot of the Pennsylvania railroad when he observed two men walking on the opposite side of the railroad track. Another person was coming towards him, who when he got close to him, bade him good evening. The Frenchman understands the English language very imperfectly, but answered him as well as he could.

His interrogator next asked him what o'clock it was, when Monsieur Rinne politely pulled out his watch and informed him. The ruffian then wanted to know whether he had any money, and on his asserting that he had not, struck him on the head twice and felled him to the earth. He then dragged him, almost insensible, to a neighboring tree, and tied him by a large handkerchief to it, so that the handkerchief served both as a gag and as a fastening.

The two other rascals then approached and stripped the unfortunate fellow naked, not even leaving his stockings upon his feet; they then bound his arms to his body, and his body to the tree securely, by means of a rope, and leisurely walked away, taking all the clothes of the party with them, which consisted of seventy-nine dollars, a key of which was unknown to the finder, and the prisoner fell in a swoon. At five o'clock in the morning, Monsieur Rinne was discovered, but was unable to give any clue to the villains, their dark coats and caps rendering them unable to be seen in the darkness.

The citizens generally in the neighborhood supplied him with clothes, &c., of which he had made free use, and he was conveyed to the station house, where he remained until morning, when he was taken before Alderman Purviance, and made an affidavit of the robbery, after which he returned to his residence.

Commonwealth vs. Henry Ryan, indictment assault and battery. The case was a very trifling one, and the prosecutor in blame. The jury rendered a verdict of not guilty and that the prosecutor should pay the costs.

Commonwealth vs. Geo. Stein, indictment manslaughter. The defendant was charged with killing a man named Storm, several months ago, in Allegheny City, by striking him on the head with a switch, while he (Stein) was attempting to put him out of his bar room. Storm died the same evening, but it is believed not from the effects of the blow. Stein was arrested and for investigation, but the most material witness for the Commonwealth being absent, the District Attorney entered a nolle prosequi, and will, we understand, send up a new bill to the next Grand Jury.

THE LOUISIANA PACKET.—This vessel which left here on the 3d of January for New Orleans, with emigrants to that city, returned to this port on Saturday. The voyage occupied thirty-seven days. On the outward passage three deaths occurred on board, one of the crew and two among the emigrants. The mate of the vessel informed us that when they left the Colony there was but little sickness prevailing there and everything was in prosperous condition. The emigrants generally were well clothed, and applied themselves industriously to erecting houses for their future residence. On board the vessel the immigrants were furnished with excellent health, and the weather generally being very fine, they seemed to enjoy themselves. There were several missionaries on board, who held daily religious services, and endeavored to employ their time in such a manner that the voyage might be profitable to the new colonists.—*Balt.
