Hebrew Literature.

Ancient Hebrew writing stands pre-eminent in the literature of the world. It is peculiarly distinct from that of any other age or people. The Jews have always maintained peculiar characteristics, which make them essentially different in their principles, customs and manners, from all the other nations of the earth; and this is true, whether we compare them to the ancient people amongst whom they dwelt prior to the Exodus from Egypt; or to those by whom they were surrounded in the land of Palestine, after they became a separate people and a great nation; or to the various populations of the earth amongst whom they have been scattered since the destruction of their great temple at Jerusalem and its worship, and their dispersion among the Gentile nations on all the face of the earth.

The nature of their religion, and their habits, as governed by it; their superior knowledge of the Deity, and their acquaintance with moral truth; their high conception of the Creator of the Universe, and of his majestic works, were more sublime, more beautiful, more harmonious and correct than those of any other people; and while their thoughts and their sentiments were more elevated and refined, their morals were more pure, their rites more sacred, and their piety more ardent—inspiring them with affections, sympathies and aspirations of the most exalted character. The people of all other nations bowed before idols, and sacrificed to their imaginary deities; but the Hebrews alone worshipped the High Supreme and Holy One. And while all others were cursed with obduracy and ignorance, by their fanities and superstitions, the religious sentiments and feelings of the Jews were permanently impressed upon their lives, and their literature, and became the chief excellence which distinguished them, both in history, science and poetry—the three great departments of civil excellence and literary greatness. The wisdom of the philosophy of every other people was founded on the fallible teachings of men; but the record of the Hebrew patriarchs and prophets speaks the language of the oracles of divine inspiration—the only infallible literature of time.

The sacred chronicles of Hebrew history are unfailing monuments of the superiority of their learning, containing, as they do, the only reliable records of their ecclesiastical, civil and military history, and of their moral precepts, religious ordinances and ritual ceremonies; and these are so intimately and essentially connected with Christianity, that they cannot be destroyed, or separated from it, without marring the harmony and effacing the beauty of the whole system. Upon these the grand superstructure of Christianity is built, and upon them it must rest, because they introduced the grand ideas of it to the world, and predicted its founder; not in terms of that doubtful phraseology of heathen oracles, interpreted to accord with passing events and fabulous history, but in the clear and explicit language of inspired prophecy, fulfilled in the after events of human history, which also attests their sublime and superiority. Among the relics of ancient learning, transmitted to the present time, the books of the Hebrew poets and prophets stand pre-eminent as literary productions, possessing the most perfect excellence and beauty incorporated in the literature of any age. They are unsurpassed for richness and purity of thought, sublimity and grandeur of style, pure and elevated morality, energy and boldness of language, and for splendor and gorgeous imagery. The philosophy of the Greeks embraced many sound views of moral truth, and its teachings inculcated many correct doctrines and elevated sentiments; but they wanted the sublime illumining and spiritual inspiration which imbued those of the sacred authors. The former saw the distant glimmerings of the great truths of morality and science as through glass, darkly," while to the Hebrew they were revealed as clear as the brightness of the meridian sun; and, notwithstanding the ancient philosophers were not the subjects altogether of a blind superstition, yet their ideas of the Deity, and of His existence and attributes, were limited and imperfect, when contrasted with the sublimer views of the inspired writers; and more especially do they fail to bear a comparison with the more exalted teachings of Jesus of Nazareth. Indeed, the Hebrew writers are everywhere full of those loftier and purer ideas of truth, whether revealed or natural. Who, in ancient and modern times, has excelled the lofty strains in which David celebrated the wisdom, goodness, power, greatness and glory of the Most High? What book exceeds that of Isaiah in richness and beauty of eloquence, or in sweetness and depth of energy?—or the book of Job in aptness of imagery and boldness of style?—"A piece of writing," says Schlegel, "which, considered merely as such, is, without doubt, one of the most characteristic and sublime which has come down to us from the ancient world." Where do we find such accurate and faithful historians as those of the Bible? Where is there found a moral code which abounds with more correct precepts and useful maxims, for the government of society and the regulation of human conduct, than that which is set forth in the five books of the Pentateuch, the Proverbs and the four Gospels, by Moses, Solomon and Christ. "The peculiar faith and confidence in God," continues the author just quoted, "which were the inheritance of the Jews, are expressed with less Mosaic mystery as we advance in the sacred volume, and appear in their full light in the Psalms of David, the allegories of Solomon, and the prophecies of Isaiah. These works, set forth with a splendor and sublimity which, considered merely as poetry, excite our wonder, and disdain all comparison with any other compositions; they form a fountain of fiery and god-like inspiration, of which the greatest of modern poets have never been weary of drinking, which has suggested to them their noblest images, and animated them for their most magnificent flights." It is to the sacred oracles, above all other books, we should go to learn how much we are indebted to the Divine Mind for the vastness of our conceptions of the infinite, the beautiful and the eternal, and the correctness of our sentiments, the purity of our affections, and of our moral aspirations and sympathies; the beauty and spirituality of our religious faith and devotion.

In comparing the Old with the New Testament, notwithstanding the difference of style which characterize the various writers, still we find in each developed equal depth of thought and eloquence of language, and equal brilliancy of imagination, force of style, and energy of diction. In the simple sketches of Isaiah, who "spake as man never spake," and as exhibited in his unequalled sermon on the mount, and in the epistles of Paul—the richest productions of the strongest minds and most powerful intellects of any age—we see the superior energy and beauty of Biblical literature; and in the extemporaneous and unpremeditated speech of the Prisoner-Apostle, before King Agrippa, touching the things whereof he was accused of the Jews, there is more of true eloquence than in the high-toned, far-famed orations of Demosthenes or Cicero; and, although the eloquence of one shook the throne of Philip, and the eloquence of the other the Forum and the Senate, yet, when the prisoner speaks, kings bow to listen and admire—Agrippa fears and Felix trembles at his eloquence, and Paul is honored as a Roman. But the pen of the great Apostle most honors his name to posterity. Paul has never been equalled as a writer, having surpassed all others, ancient or modern, in whatever belongs to excellence, power and beauty in an author. He stands as a sun in the grand system of the intellectual luminaries of the world.—His epistles are the purest models of fine writing, as well as of powerful reasoning and superior argumentation.

Nor is superiority and excellence in sacred authorship peculiar to the writings of Paul alone. Superiority and excellence characterize all the books of the sacred canon. Every where there is found in them that which, because of the superior value with which they are invested, asserts their claim to the first place in the standard literature of every age.

The Bible, then—the great book of the world's history—is the most important book of the world's literature—the most valuable collection of the learning and progress of human society, possessing more that is of the highest and most available import to the duties and interests of the race of man than any other book, or than all other books, known in human language; because from it has been derived all the important elements of human learning, human society and human government—it being the only book whose authority is sufficient to impart purity in morals, excellence in civilization, and power in the principles of social organization and civil legislation. Upon its teachings and its authority has been founded the moral principles and precepts, and the civil ordinances and laws which govern society.—All that is excellent and beautiful in the customs and laws of society and government, has been derived from the Scriptures. The Bible is the foundation of the prime institutions of church and state. It has introduced, perpetuated and promoted all the great principles of theology, science, civilization and literature, and whatever relates most essentially to the permanent progress, improvement, elevation and happiness of man.

MEDICAL.

CHERRY PECTORAL

COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS, BRONCHITIS, WHOOPING-COUGH, CROUP, ASTHMA, CONSUMPTION.

THIS invaluable remedy for all diseases of the THROAT and LUNGS, has attained a celebrity from its remarkable cures, never equalled by any other medicine before. Other preparations have shown themselves palliatives, and sometimes effected notable cures, but none has ever so fully won the confidence of every community where it is known. After years of trial in every climate, the results have subjustified them to possess a mastery over this dangerous class of diseases, which could not fail to attract the attention of Physicians, Patients, and the public at large.

See the statement, not of obscure individuals, and from far distant places, but of men who are known and respected throughout the country.

The widely celebrated Surgeon, Doctor VALENTINE MOTT, of New York city, says:

"It gives me pleasure to certify the value and efficacy of "AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL," which I consider peculiarly adapted to cure diseases of the throat lungs."

Dr. PERKINS, the venerable President of the Vermont Medical College, one of the eminently learned physicians of this country, writes, the CHERRY PECTORAL is extensively used in this section, where it has shown unmistakable evidence of its happy effect upon pulmonary diseases.

The Rev. JOHN COCHRAN, a distinguished clergyman of the Episcopal Church, writes to the proprietor from Montreal, that "He has been cured of a severe Asthmatic affection, by CHERRY PECTORAL." His letter at full length, may be found in our Circular, to be had of the Agent, and is worth the attention of Asthmatic patients.

The following letter from the well known Druggist at Hillsdale, Michigan, one of the largest dealers in the State, and this case is proof his own observation.

HILLSDALE, Mich., Dec. 10, 1850.

DEAR SIR—Immediately on receipt of your CHERRY PECTORAL, I carried a bottle to an acquaintance of mine who was thought to be near his end with quick consumption. He was then unable to rise from his bed, and was extremely feeble. The friends believed he must soon die, and were prepared for the event. Your PECTORAL was administered. Long weeks from the day he commenced taking your medicine, he was at work in his shop, as usual, at his trade of a blacksmith.

Various other cases within my knowledge, where the CHERRY PECTORAL has been singularly successful, but these are marked as the Very truly yours,

ANDERWOOD.

Hear the Patient.

ST. JOHN, Lowell—Dear Sir—Feeling under obligations to you for the restoration of my health, I send you a report of my case, which you are at liberty to publish for the benefit of others. Last autumn I had a bad cold, accompanied by a severe cough, and took several remedies without relief. The cough grew worse, and I began to give up business, frequently raised blood, and could get no sleep at night. A friend gave me a bottle of your CHERRY PECTORAL. Before I had taken the contents I perceived a change, according to directions. I have just purchased the fifth bottle, and am nearly well. I consider myself well, my cough has ceased, and all by the use of your valuable medicine.

Yours truly,
Principal St. Hope Seminary.

HAVERHILL, Mass., April 6, 1852.

DEAR SIR: I wish I could tell all that suffer with a cough, what a cure CHERRY PECTORAL has performed in my family. I am sure they might be benefitted by the information. I had been very much afflicted with my throat and lungs, and had been for years. Every winter I was sure to have a bad cough. Finally I thought I must soon sink in consumption. I had no appetite, and was fearful I should not live to see spring away. I began to take your beautiful medicine, by the advice of a clergyman, and before I had taken one bottle I ceased my cough at first, and gave me rest at night. In the course of a fortnight I was able to work, and have continued to be in good health ever since. I have recommended it to many others, and they have found relief. Now, after five weeks, I can say that I am entirely well, and strong, with no wish to keep from your CHERRY PECTORAL.

JULIA PLAIN.

I hereby certify it at the above statement of my wife is correct, myself, who was one of her physicians, and was consulted by JOSEPH DEAN.

The above named Rev. Mr. Dean, Mr. Anderwood, and Mr. St. John, are well known to the Editor of the Boston Recorder, and their statements may be relied on.

The best Remedy ever known to Man.

Coughs, Asthma, Colds, Bronchitis, Influenza, Hoarseness, and for the Speedy, Infallible and Permanent Cure of Consumption, Pain or soreness in the breast or side. For stages of Consumption, &c.

In cases, the sufferers is peculiarly adapted in every stage of the Disease and Fever, which is produced in one way or another.

WILD CHERRY HAS LONG BEEN

one of the most important medicinal properties of the forest, and its virtues are known to every person. Combined with other substances, more active, it is used in many preparations, but for the cure of Consumption, and all diseases of the throat and lungs, it is unrivalled by any other remedy. Many cases so far as to be pronounced incurable by physicians, whose names are familiar to their fellow citizens, have been restored to health by its use. Clergymen, Lawyers, Statesmen, and others, who have been obliged to relinquish their business, avocation, or profession, on account of their voices failing, or their lungs becoming affected, have, by the use of this remedy, been restored to perfect health, and to the full exercise of their powers.

Public Speakers and Singers will find in it a timely protection against sudden attacks of Hoarseness, and a permanent strengthener of the vocal organs.

Mothers should not permit their children to suffer from Coughs, Colds, Croup, Whooping-Cough, Bronchitis, Influenza, Hoarseness, Asthma, or Consumption, when they can be cured by this pleasant remedy.

ANOTHER ASTONISHING CURE.

From the highly respectable merchant of Nashville, Tenn.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Co., Ohio, April 6, 1852.

Dear Sir—Having used your valuable medicine, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, in my family, I feel desirous to give my testimony in favor of it. My wife was afflicted with a severe cough, and could get no relief, until she used your Cherry Pectoral, which has entirely cured her. I have also used it in my family for a severe cold, and found it to be the best medicine I ever used. I have recommended it to many others, who have used it with the same success. I am satisfied it is the best medicine for Coughs, Colds, Consumption, and all diseases of the throat and lungs, that is now before the public.

Yours, with respect,
JOHN M. LOCKE.
