"At one o'clock on the following morning, (the 20th.) General Twiggs, with Captain Lee of the engineer corps, whose distinguished services on both days, will not, I am sure, be overlooked, came to my bivousek with orders from the general-in-chief to assemble all the forces in my immediate neighborhood, and occupy a position in order to create a diversion in favor of days when the my my more at days of day. Being myself mable to keep my saddle, or to walk, in consequence of a severe injury from a fall off my horse the day before, the command of this force devoiced upon Gol. Rasson, of the 9th infantry. The night was extremely dark, and the rain poured in torrente, but lithis gallant and efficient officer succeeded in organizing his force, and in gaining the position assigned him without difficulty. His presence attracted the fire of the enemy, until the storading parties under the direction of Gen. Smith had crowned the hill immediately in rear of their works and when this brilliant achievement of storming the enemy's battories was perfected, Rauson's command poured a devouring free into the ranks of the fugitives. In passing through there, it is so minutely subdi-vided that the particles composing it are brought passing through these, it is so minutely subdivised that the particles composing at are brought it to close contact with the metal which forms the wires. Now let us suppose, what setually takes place, that the eide of the regenerator nearest the working oylinder is heated to a high temporature. Through this heated substance the air must pass before entering the cylinder, and in effecting this passage, it takes up, as is demonstrated by the thermometer about 460° of the 480° of heat required, as we before stated, it double its volume. The additional 80° are emmunicated by the fire beneath the cylinder. The air has thus become expanded; it forces the pistou upward; it has done its work—valves of en—and the imprisoned sir, heated to 480°, oren—and the imprisoned oir, heated to 480°, passes from the cylinder, and again enters the of heat we have mentioned, and that

bis was semething more than a mere compli nent. The promptitude and unanimity of the lenate in passing upon this pomination marked Cennedy is held by that body, to nearly all of whom he is personally known. Mr. Kennedy, presses from the cylinder, and again enters the regenerator, through which it must pass before leaving the machine. We have said that the side of this instrument nearest the working cylinder is hot, and it should be here stated that the other side is kept cool, by the action upon it of the side in kept cool, by the action upon it of the side in kept cool, by the action upon it of the side in kept cool, by the action upon it of the side in the other side is kept cool, by the action upon it of the side in the other side is kept cool, by the action upon it of the side in the other side is kept cool, by the action upon it of the side of the piston. Consequently, as the air from the working cylinder passes out, the wires absorb its heat so effectually that when it leaves the regenerator, it has been robbed of it all, except about 30°. In other words, as the air passes into the working cylinder is gradually receives from the regenerator about 450° of heat; and as it passes out, this is returned to the wires, and is thus used over and over, the only purpose of the first beneath the cylinders being to supply the 30° of heat we have mentioned, and that tion, aided by the treachery of the Tyler faction and the influence of a hostile administration, transfulary as this statement may seem, it is and carried forward the business of legislation nevertheless incontrovertibly proved by the thermost signal and glorious results. It was also a service well rendered, not less in vindication of the past than the present. The motives of the fainers of the present constitution and of the people in 1892 had been placed in their true light. So much was due to them. It was also due to this Convention and the people whom they respresent, and due to the reputation of the State abroad, that it be well understood that the State abread, that it be well understood that both of the provisions—the religions test and the property qualifications—that been a 'dead letter, at least as long as the Chairman [Mr. Sawyer] had participated to any extent in the councils of the State. They had been participated to any extent in the councils of the State. They had been participations. The Chairman would remember that many years ago, at a time of high party excitement, it was suggested that a member of the House of Representatives occupied his scat without the requisite property qualifications. But two objects at once occurred to any action upon the subject; the first was that investigation and action, instead of rejecting one member, might probably vacate tweaty scate; the second was, that no member could probably he found to move hat no member could probably he found to move a matter so utterly repugnant to public ser

The religious test in the consitution had undeniably been a stigma upon the State, at home and abroad. It had been repeatedly named to him, and once at least in a foreign land, as unworthy the intelligent and liberal spirit of our countrymen. Although he had at times felt keenly the reproach, he had uniformly referred, as he had no doubt other gentlemen had done, to other parts of the apparitution as illustration. as an and no doubt older gentlemen had done, to other parts of the constitution as illustrating the true and free spirit of our fathers, and to these as, at least for many years, a blank. The greatfquestion of religious toleration was prac-tically settled, and settled in a manner never to tically settled, and settled in a manner never to be reversed while we retain our present form of government, more than thirty years ago. The provisions now olsaming the attention of the committee could hardly be said to involve an open question. They had been the subject of discussion in every lyceum, every condenty, debating club, every town; and there was perhaps no subject on which public opinion and public feeling were so uniform and densive. The substance, if substance they ever had, having long aimce passed away, he rejoiced that the proper conseion had at length strived to dispease with the form.

There-if that is all that Gen. Pierce could say or do towards relieving New Hampshire of a disgrace that causes her to be regarded with scorn by every liberal-minded man in the United States and in the civilized world, we sak if he is
